Roosevelt Plea In Farm Crisis On Air Sunday

Cabinet Meeting Held as Unrest in West Causes Concern.

Producers' Strike Winning Support

Growers in Oklahoma and Montana Join Movement.

President Roosevelt, talking directly to farmers of the West, is expected to explain the attitude of the Administration toward their trouble at 10 o'clock Sunday night, when he will speak on a Nation-wide radio hook-up. The talk will be the President's third Nation-wide radio address since he assumed office.

Announcement of plans for the radio talk came as reports of unrest in the agricultural regions poured into Washington.

At the White House it was said that the President will discuss "many subjects of current interest and importance."

The Cabinet discussed the situation yesterday and it is believed the Government is preparing to offer loans on crops still held by the farmers.

Following the cabinet meeting it was stated definitely at the White House that the administration has not changed its policy designed to raise prices of farm commodities.

The President is observing carefully all the developments that started with the declaration of a wheat embargo in North Dakota and continued with an appeal from the Farm Holiday Association, meeting in Omaha, for a general strike beginning at noon today.

Bryan Wins Support.

The strike call was made by Milo Reno, president of the association. Reno asked Omaha business men to support the movement, and then went to Des Moines to look over the Iowa situation.

Meanwhile Gov. Charles W. Bryan of Nebraska expressed sympathy with the purposes of the strike, and Gov. A. G. Schmedeman of Wisconsin pledged his assistance.

The meeting of business men with whom Reno conferred in Omaha went on record in favor of guaranteeing the farmer cost of production.

It remained uncertain last night what proportions the strike would reach. Leaders predicted that it would not be felt before Monday.

At St. Paul, Vice President John Bosch, of the Holiday Association, announced plans to send flying squadrons of from 100 to 1,000 farmers through the country, urging farmers to join the movement.

Farmers Balk Foreclosure.

Near the area in which farm discontent foreclosures last spring resulted in violence and National Guard rule for a time, 200 farmers packed the county courthouse at Sioux City, Iowa, yesterday and prevented foreclosure sale of a farm at Lawton on which Joe Moyse had lived 50 years.

In North Dakota Gov. Langer or-

Plea for U. S. Farm Embargo Sent Roosevelt

Farmers Urged to Form "Defense Councils" to Aid Strike.

Lincoln, Nebr., Oct. 20 (AP). — An appeal to Washington for a Presidential embargo on importation of all farm and manufactured food products was sent tonight by H. C. Parmenter, of Yutan, Nebraska Farmers Holiday Association president.

State leaders issued a call to farmers to organize "councils of defense" in every county to make effective the farm strike set to start tomorrow at noon.

The "councils of defense" were ordered with the double aim of keeping farm products at home and preventing violence.

Secretary F. C. Crocker of the Nebraska Holiday Association, predicted the strike would "spread like wild fire without any organization" and expressed hope violence could be avoided.

Schmedeman for Strike.

Madison, Wis., Oct. 20 (AP).—Gov. A. G. Schmedeman today expressed himself in entire sympathy with the national strike of the Farm Holiday Association and pledged assistance of the administration "in a forceful but dignified demand which will immediately put agriculture in Wisconsin on the road to a restoration to its former high position."

"While it has been my earnest hope," the governor said, "that the action taken by the association Thursday night could be deferred, I find myself in sympathy with the purpose of an orderly holiday."

Militia Awaits Orders.

Bismarck, N. Dak., Oct. 20 (AP).—National Guard officers waited today for mobilization orders from Gov. William Langer to enforce his embargo on wheat shipments from North Dakota.

The railroads continued to ship wheat despite the ban, but Langer reiterated the embargo would "stay put."

He pointed to plans of the National Farmers Holiday Association for a Nation-wide strike as a move that would assist in making North Dakota's wheat embargo more effective.

That guardsmen could be used to halt railroads from shipping wheat was regarded as unlikely, as State

France Faces Pay Cut Crisis

Daladier Cabinet Near Overthrow on Slash of Employes.

Paris, Oct. 20 (AP).—The defeat of Premier Edouard Daladier's cabinet loomed menacingly tonight as Radical Socialists and Socialists failed to agree on the part of the premier's budget balancing program providing for a reduction in government employes' pay.

The premier warned the chamber finance committee if the budget is not balanced inflation of the franc will be necessary in six weeks.

Under the whiplash of the drooping franc, which went to 18.35 francs to the dollar (5.449 cents to the franc) in after-hours trading, compared with an official close of 18.18 francs (5.5005 cents), the main elements of the Government's support vainly struggled for a compromise.

There also were rumblings in the senate, which wants more economies and less taxes.

The premier's fight for the life of the government and the protection of the French currency will begin openly Sunday, when debate will start in the chamber.

2,000 Feared Lost In Japanese Typhoon

Tokyo, Japan, Oct. 21 (Saturday) (U.P.).—Terrific damage to property and fishing boats was reported in a typhoon which swept Shikoku, one of the four main islands of Japan.

Initial dispatches from the storm-torn region said 2,000 fishermen were missing and 1,000 fishing boats lost.

Senate Query Defies N. Y. Stock Mart

Questionnaires Will Be Distributed Despite Whitney.

Probers Go Over Head of Exchange Head to Get Data.

Proceeding independently of the New York Stock Exchange, the Senate Banking Committee reached informal agreement yesterday on a stock market questionnaire and prepared to circulate brokers without exchange assistance.

Richard Whitney, stock exchange president, early this week declined to distribute the questionnaires. Roland L. Redmond, counsel for the exchange, reiterated this position before the committee yesterday.

"I see no occasion for further inviting their cooperation," said Ferdinand Pecora, committee counsel, following the agreement.

'We asked their cooperation and we didn't get it. So now we will proceed without it."

Confer With Brokers.

The understanding came at a conference of New York brokers with committee investigators, while Pecora, in an adjoining room, was taking testimony on pool operations of Chase National Bank affiliates in stock of their parent company.

Minor changes in the form of the questionnaire were made at the request of brokers.

A committee composed of Gayer Dominick, of Dominick & Dominick; E. A. Pierce, of E. A. Pierce & Co., and John N. Prentiss, of Hornblower & Weeks, was named to discuss these changes with investigators in New York Monday.

Meantime, Albert H. Wiggin, retired former chairman of the board of the Chase National Bank, detailed operation of two "trading accounts" in Chase stock, in which Metpotan, a subsidiary of the Chase Securities Corporation, participated.

Wiggin said the operations were to "keep a steady price" for Chase National Bank stock.

"You must have purchasing power to assist in a selling campaign," he told the committee.

"Did it interfere with the normal law of supply and demand in determining prices?" Pecora asked.

"It had some influence from day to day," replied Wiggin, "but not in the long run."

Offer From Lamont.

Once Pecora deviated to read a telegram signed "Tom," offering Wiggin 10,000 shares of stock in the Alleghany Corporation, then selling in the market for $35 at $20 a share.

Wiggin identified "Tom" as Thomas W. Lamont, of J. P. Morgan & Co. He said he bought the stock but lost on the deal.

"That was because you didn't take advantage of the market at that time," said Pecora.

Again, Pecora read into the record a letter transmitting a $105,467 check to Wiggin as profit on "a Hudson Motor Car Co. pool account."

"You didn't refuse the check because of the odium on pools?" asked Senator Couzens (Republican), Michigan.

"No," said Wiggin.

The witness told of a "trading account" managed by the Metpotan Corporation with Potter & Co., McClure, Jones & Co. and Broomhall, Killough & Co. from April, 1929, to July, 1930. He said there was a profit of $321,450, with 38,440 shares left over.

Tells of Stabilizing Market.

Metpotan subscribed for Broomhall & Killough's share in these when that firm went bankrupt. The Chase Securities Corporation's subsidiary then formed a new syndicate with McClure Jones & Co. and Potter & Co. which ran until Au-

Woman Gold Note Hoarder Gives Bail

"No Criminal," She Claims, Posting $5,000.

Fresno, Calif., Oct. 20 (AP).—Mrs. Effie L. Martin, charged with hoarding approximately $85,000 in gold certificates, was released today under a new bond of $5,000 by a U. S. commissioner.

"Well, I haven't done anything criminal, anyway," said Mrs. Martin as she signed her name to various documents. "This is my first offense. I've not even been arrested for parking or speeding."

Preliminary hearing was set for October 27. Mrs. Martin surrendered the gold in San Francisco yesterday.

Soviet Accepts U. S. Invitation To Hold Recognition Parley; Moscow Hails Roosevelt Step

Russian Foreign Office Sees Move Toward Blocking War.

Rise in Trade Believed Close at Hand as Credit Is Sought.

(Copyright, 1933, by the Associated Press.)

Moscow, Oct. 20.—Russia announced tonight its acceptance of President Roosevelt's proposal to negotiate for the American recognition of the Soviet Union, believing that such action will serve the cause of world peace.

In the most cordial terms the Soviet president, Mikhail Kalinin, replied to a message President Roosevelt sent him on October 10, and announced he would send the foreign commissar, Maxim Litvinoff, to Washington.

A foreign office spokesman, who gave out copies of the messages between the two presidents, said that "President Roosevelt's step comes at a moment when the cause of peace is being assailed in many parts of the world."

Points to Germany.

He pointed to the withdrawal of Germany from the League of Nations and the situation in the Far East and declared, "President Roosevelt's action can only serve to encourage friends of peace."

It was understood here that President Roosevelt will personally conduct the negotiations with Litvinoff in Washington.

Today's announcement occasioned universal satisfaction in Russia, which hopes for greatly increased long-term credit facilities, the lifting of American barriers against some of its goods and a strengthening of its position in the Far East with respect to its relations with Japan.

Russia has virtually made the first two the conditions for any serious revival of Soviet-American trade, which has declined since 1931.

Credit Issue Looms.

It is considered not unlikely that the Russians will seek credit facilities from the United States at least equal in terms to those they now enjoy in such countries as Germany, England and Italy. These governments have assisted private business in financing Soviet purchases in their countries over periods ranging from two to more than four years.

In this connection, Soviet officials looked hopefully to the precedent set last summer by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation in lending $4,000,000 to American business men to finance cotton sales to Russia as a possible entering wedge for larger and larger credits from the same source.

Against the statement during the London Economic Conference of Litvinoff that Russia was prepared to take $1,000,000,000 worth of equipment and raw materials in return for normal trading facilities, stand these facts:

1. Russia reduced its imports more than 100 per cent in the first six months of 1933, compared to a like period in 1932, in an effort to bring them more nearly in line with its income from exports.

Industries Improve.

2. As its industrialization program progresses Russia is relying more and more on equipment manufactured at home, as evidenced by the order last winter of G. Ordzhonokidzie, commissar for heavy industry, prohibiting the further purchase of certain industrial equip-

First Official Messages Between Soviet and U. S. in Sixteen Years

President Roosevelt yesterday made public the following correspondence on the Government's move toward recognition of Soviet Russia:

THE WHITE HOUSE

Washington, Oct. 10, 1933.

My dear Mr. President:

Since the beginning of my administration, I have contemplated the desirability of an effort to end the present abnormal relations between the hundred and twenty-five million people of the United States and the hundred and sixty million people of Russia.

It is most regrettable that these great peoples, between whom a happy tradition of friendship existed for more than a century to their mutual advantage, should now be without a practical method of communicating directly with each other.

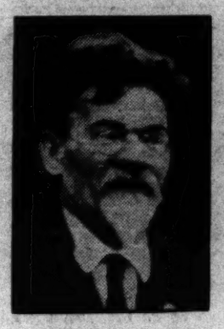
The difficulties that have created this anomalous situation are serious but not, in my opinion, insoluble; and difficulties between great nations can be removed only by frank, friendly conversations. If you are of similar mind, I should be glad to receive any representatives you may designate to explore with me personally all questions outstanding between our countries.

Participation in such a discussion would, of course, not commit either nation to any future course of action, but would indicate a sincere desire to reach a satisfactory solution of the problems involved. It is my hope that such conversations might result in good to the people of both our countries.

I am, my dear Mr. President,

Very sincerely yours,

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.



PRESIDENT KALININ.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT.

Mr. Mikhail Kalinin,
President of the All Union Central Executive Committee, Moscow

October 17th, 1933.

My dear Mr. President:

I have received your message of October tenth.

I have always considered most abnormal and regrettable a situation wherein, during the past sixteen years, two great republics—the United States of America and the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics—have lacked the usual methods of communication and have been deprived of the benefits which such communication could give. I am glad to note that you also reached the same conclusion.

There is no doubt that difficulties, present or arising, between two countries, can be solved only when direct relations exist between them; and that, on the other hand, they have no chance for solution in the absence of such relations. I shall take the liberty further to express the opinion that the abnormal situation, to which you correctly refer in your message, has an unfavorable effect not only on the interests of the two states concerned, but also on the general international situation, increasing the element of disquiet, complicating the process of consolidating world peace and encouraging forces tending to disturb that peace.

In accordance with the above, I gladly accept your proposal to send to the United States a representative of the Soviet Government to discuss with you the questions of interest to our countries. The Soviet Government will be represented by Mr. M. M. Litvinov, People's Commissar for Foreign Affairs, who will come to Washington at a time to be mutually agreed upon.

I am, my dear Mr. President,

Very sincerely yours,

MIKHAIL KALININ.

Mr. Franklin D. Roosevelt,
President of the United States of America,
Washington.

Virginia "Gas" Levy Rebate Held Illegal

Richmond Judge Decides "Competition" Plan Discriminates.

Richmond, Va., Oct. 20 (AP).—The act of the special session of the General Assembly in granting a refund to service stations in zones near the District of Columbia was declared unconstitutional in a decision handed down today by Judge Julien Gunn in City Circuit Court.

The refund had been granted to offset the lower price of gasoline in Washington.

The court ruled that "upon presentation of the proper order the same will be entered, enjoining and restraining the director of the division of motor vehicles from attempting to execute the provisions of said act."

Plaintiffs were C. M. Cowan and James T. Horton, who sued on behalf of themselves and others.

Judge Gunn ruled the question involved is "whether the effect of the act of the special session is discriminatory against certain taxpayers embraced in one and the same class.

"It is unquestioned that stations serving the public by the sale of gasoline, motor oil, fuels, used in the propulsion of vehicles, both passenger and traffic, over the roads of the Commonwealth, are within the same class.

"Therefore, any law the result of which would be a discrimination against any individuals within the same classification in favor of any other individuals within the same classification is discriminatory and therefore contravenes the Constitution."

National Recovery Administration regulations forbid rebates by oil companies to dealers in border zones. When this order was put into effect, operators in the border territory sought State approval for continuation of the rebate system.

Argentina Ranchman Marries Beatrice Ray

Orange, N. J., Oct. 20 (AP).—It was revealed today that Kathryn Josephine Palmer, stage beauty under the name of Beatrice Ray, was married a week ago in the office of Judge Edward L. Davis, to Martin de Alzaga, Argentine rancher.

Miss Ray gave her age as 28 and De Alzaga said he was 32. Health department records showed Miss Ray had been married and divorced.

Tax of 22 Cents Costs 68 More In Fees, Postage

Danville, Va., Oct. 20 (Spl.).—It cost a Danville stationer 68 cents yesterday to pay 22 cents to the Government as cotton-processing tax on cotton contained in typewriter ribbons.

Notary fees and postage more than equaled the tax, and in addition the remittance forwarded to the Government was overweight and came back for extra stamps.

Morgan Talks; Breaks Rule

Banker in First Interview Enthuses About Grouse Shooting.

New York, Oct. 20 (AP).—J. P. Morgan, back from Europe, says he doesn't know what the new banking laws mean. He arrived on the Berengaria today and granted an interview on shipboard, something he never has done before.

Sitting back in an easy chair as the liner steamed from quarantine to its dock, the banker crossed his knees, folded his hands and puffed on a meerschaum pipe.

"When I went away three months ago," he related, "I said I didn't know what the new laws meant and that we would have to find out first and then do whatever we are supposed to do."

The comment was given in reply to a question as to whether he felt private bankers would have to concentrate on investment banking rather than commercial banking, as a result of the new law.

"It is the business of banks to obey the law, but I don't know yet what that means."

Another banker had stated, he was told, that the new law was "impossible" and would have to be rewritten.

"If it makes banking impossible," Morgan said, "then it is hardly worth while to have banking, is it?"

He was in a high good humor as he listened to a series of questions that he wouldn't answer. Sometimes he waved his hand and said: "I can't answer that because I don't know what has been going on in America." Sometimes he just chuckled.

He declined to comment on the NRA, saying, "I don't know enough about it."

"Don't you see," he added, "I want

Congress Poll Shows Leaning To Recognition

Approval of President's Invitation Voiced; Few Opposed.

A majority of the members of Congress who could be reached in Washington last night for comment approved of President Roosevelt's invitation to Russia to send a delegate here to discuss recognition. Opposition was voiced, however, by some members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and spokesmen for women's patriotic organizations here.

Some of the comment:

Senator Couzens (Republican), Michigan.—"I certainly am in favor of discussion of resumption of diplomatic relations. I wouldn't want to say at this time that I favored recognition. But if, after discussion, the President thinks an equitable basis has been reached, I hope he will recognize the Soviet Union."

Senator Adams (Democrat), Colorado.—"This would not involve actually recognizing the Russian form of government. At least we can let them sit on the porch, even though it may not be necessary to invite them into the house."

Brookhart Delighted.

Former Senator Smith W. Brookhart, foreign trade expert of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration.—"I am delighted. I have no doubt that the visit will result in full recognition."

Senator Reynolds (Democrat), North Carolina — "Splendid. It is what I have been urging all along."

Senator Black (Democrat), Alabama—"I am very glad it has been done, and I hope it will lead to early recognitio-."

Senator Kin- (Democrat), Utah—"I have been opposed to recognizing the Bolshevist regime. I see no reason to change those views."

Last year a United Press poll of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee showed that the following favored recognition: Borah (Repub-

President to Act In Drafting Pact

Heads of Two Nations Exchange Cables in Move to End Rift.

By Elliott Thurston.

As a result of President Roosevelt's cabled invitation, President Mikhail Kalinin of Soviet Russia will send his commissar for foreign affairs, Maxim Litvinoff, immediately to Washington to discuss resumption of diplomatic relations after 15 years of rupture.

Simultaneously in Washington and Moscow the two heads of government made public yesterday an exchange of cables agreeing to explore, without committing "either nation to any future course of action," the issues of debts, Communist propaganda, sanctity of contracts and trade which have stood in the way of recognition ever since the Red revolution.

That Mr. Roosevelt would initiate Soviet recognition has long been foreshadowed by his friendly gestures, the last of which was to make Henry Morgenthau, jr., head of the Farm Credit Administration, a coordinator of trade relations. However, yesterday's announcement outweighs all previous steps in importance, since it is the first direct overture looking frankly to renewal of normal diplomatic relationships between the two countries.

Preliminary Step Taken.

The President emphasized that this significant step does not constitute recognition. But is is the next thing to it—the necessary, indispensable preliminary. It is a victory for the recognitionists, whose most vocal leaders have come from the rebellious West.

Senators Borah, of Idaho; Norris, of the now turbulent Nebraska; Wheeler, of wheat-raising Montana, and others of the disaffected farm belt have championed the cause now projected into the limelight of world attention at an hour when the Administration is deeply disturbed over the agrarian troubles at home.

Until recently the unabated protests of labor, the Legion, and various patriotic groups, had dimmed the prospects for recognition, but 10 days ago the President cabled M. Kalinin, president of the All Union Central Executive Committee at Moscow, asking him to send "any representatives you may designate to explore with me personally all questions outstanding between our two countries."

In a cabled reply, dated October

Giant Spinning Tower Harnesses Wind In Test for New Source of Electric Power

By Howard Blakeslee
(Associated Press Science Editor).

Burlington, N. J., Oct. 20 (AP).—A cylindrical metal tower, 90 feet tall and 28 feet broad, was set spinning top-like at 50 miles an hour here today to illustrate the possibility of tapping the enormous power in wind on a commercial scale.

The tall duralumin tower is the land version of the pipe-like rotors which several years ago drove Anton Flettner's rotor ship across the Atlantic. It is the first step toward erecting a set of 90-foot rotors to develop electricity from wind power.

The plans are to erect in some wind-favored locality a battery of not less than 20 of these great towers, each mounted on a 150-ton wheeled truck, which it is to drive around a circular railway.

The rotor, spun today for its first public demonstration, was anchored firmly in an open meadow. It showed its force by pulling against and bending four steel bars, each 2 inches thick, 6 wide and 36 long.

With the wind at 10 miles an hour and the tower's circumference rotating at 50-mile speed, the tower exerted a pull on these bars of 8,000 pounds.

This rotor is the life dream of Julius D. Madaras, who started with the idea 20 years ago when a high school boy in Hungary. He got the idea from studying the spin of a rifle bullet.

Small models have been operated in wind tunnels at the University of Michigan under Mr. Madaras' direction. Mr. Madaras calculates the rotors might develop power at a fifth the average 1929 cost of steam and hydroelectric plants.

Europe Eyes U. S. Gesture To Russians

France Alone May Favor Recognition, Assert Statesmen.

(Copyright, 1933, by the United Press.)

London, Oct. 20.—Diplomatic chancelleries of Europe are firmly convinced today that establishment of normal relations between the United States and Soviet Russia will evoke far greater repercussions in the Far East than in Europe.

These experts on political trends believe that the most important immediate effect will be to bridle Japanese expansion in Asia, at China's expense so far—but possibly at Russia's in north Manchuria and Siberia, unless checked.

Many foreign affairs experts have gone further than this and surmise that the recent swing of the Asiatic balance-of-power in Japan's favor may be halted by cooperation between the United States and Soviets. The restoration of political relations is generally expected to diminish, if not completely allay, the fears of a Japanese war.

France May Favor Move.

The move probably will not prove entirely popular in European capitals. In view of her recently strengthened friendship with Moscow following the rise of Nazi Germany, France may be alone among the major powers in looking favorably upon this reinforcement of Russia's world position.

British and Germans may be expected to react somewhat against the Russo-American accord.

Even though Downing street and Wilhelmstrasse may express gratification, observers believe neither will regard this development as favorable to its own interests.

Trade is Germany's Aim.

Fear the United States may replace Germany as the chief recipient of Soviet purchases abroad is an acute factor in determining the German attitude. If, Moscow secures favorable credit terms in the United States, Russia's purchases there may be extended from cotton and metals, such as copper and tin, to heavy industrial machinery now bought largely in Germany.

The British attitude will be dictated by both political and commercial results. England desire to increase trade relations with the Soviet Union and at the same time looks uneasily on any alliance or move to strengthen Russia, whose vast republics adjoin British spheres of influence in the East.

Palm Beach, Fla., Oct. 20 (AP).—The oil tanker Freeport Sulphur No. 5 wirelessed the Radio Marine Corporation station here today that she had picked up the launch Pilot No. 1 in a disabled condition 10 miles northeast of Jupiter, Fla., with five persons on board, including women and children.

"That's Nothing," Grins Boy When Leg Is Amputated

Joliet, Ill., Oct. 20 (AP).—Carl McFarland, 13, the doctors will tell you, had plenty of nerve.

A freight train hit him today as he walked toward school.

To the ambulance driver, he grinned and said, "Hello, pal."

He rode to a hospital without whimpering and underwent a blood transfusion without flinching.

When they told him his right leg must be amputated, he replied, "that's nothing. A train killed my father in Cincinnatti four years ago."

The boy died soon after the transfusion.

17, M. Kalinin echoed Mr. Roosevelt's regrets over the protracted rupture, referred to the "abnormal situation" as having "an unfavorable effect not only on the interests of the two states concerned, but also on the general international situation." He announced that Litvinoff would "come to Washington at a time to be mutually agreed upon." The exact date for the visit has not yet been set.

Unless unforeseen obstacles arise, Mr. Roosevelt means to move rapidly ahead to complete recognition, which is entirely an Executive act, though Congress must appropriate for and the Senate must confirm appointment of our Ambassador. Thus yesterday's announcement, while long forecast, is momentous in making imminent a restoration of close relations, which will have important effects abroad and doubtless spectacular political repercussions at home.

Neither the White House nor the State Department suggested that the move was prompted at this time by the farm revolt, or by the rumblings on the Continent of Europe or in the Far East, but the consequences of the friendly gesture of alignment with the Soviet will be felt strongly in Berlin and Tokyo, and the eyes of farm bloc leaders in the West may be drawn to trade possibilities with the Soviets.

Refers to Unrest.

Kalinin alluded, in his cabled letter, to "the element of disquiet complicating the process of consolidating world peace and encouraging forces tending to disturb that peace." Those words were meant for Europe and the Orient.

Neither chief executive used the world "recognition," nor, for that matter, a close equivalent, but their purpose to achieve recognition is none the less unmistakable, and both expressed confidence that the questions at issue could be satisfactorily settled in what Mr. Roosevelt termed "frank, friendly conversations."

The President, not his Secretary of State or other associates, will deal with Litvinoff directly. The Russian Commissar will be received at the White House like any prime minister.

Ever since overthrow of the czarist regime in 1917 deadlock has gripped the recognition question. Since his inauguration, the President has steadily broken the ice. His delegation at the London Economic Conference was instructed to deal openly and directly with the Russians, and Secretary of State Hull, his special assistant, William C. Bullett; erstwhile Assistant Secretary Moley, and others did considerable exploring of the case in relation to trade potentialities.

Recognition Required.

A $4,000,000 cotton credit was arranged through the Reconstruction Finance Corporation for Russia, but nonrecognition loomed more and more as a stumbling lock. Soviet officials have all along insisted that recognition must precede trade on any expanded scale, despite the large sales of machinery and cotton to Russia in connection with the famous five-year plan.

The Harding, Coolidge and Hoover administrations made no overtures and set such conditions for recognition, requiring Soviet initiative in recognizing debts, renouncing propaganda and guaranteeing contracts, that nothing happened. Mr. Roosevelt was the first since Woodrow Wilson to address the Soviet directly.

Last May he sent his world peace appeal directly to Moscow, as he did to other capitals, an act proclaimed then as a forerunner of formal recognition.

American relations with Russia were definitely severed in July of 1918. The Soviet repudiated czarist debts in the preceding January. On the heels of the 1917 revolution, just as the United States was about to enter the World War, President Wilson recognized the provisional government, sent Elihu Root on a special mission to aid the new Kerensky regime and loaned it $187,000,000.

Overtures by Wilson.

When the bolshevists ousted Kerensky in November, 1917, Wilson sought to keep Russia in the war and made friendly overtures, but the Soviet signed the Brest-Litovsk separate treaty of peace with Germany, and in January, 1921, when the Soviet sent Ludwin Martens as envoy to the United States, Wilson refused to receive him and ordered him deported.

The Wilson administration supported Boris A. Bakhmeteff, Kerensky's ambassador, instead. Bainbridge Colby, then Secretary of State, gave as the reasons for refusal to recognize the Soviets, repudiation of debts, subversive propaganda and the despotic nature of the bolshevist order.

In August, 1918, American troops were sent to Archangel and Vladivostok, along with Allied contingents, and the last American forces were not withdrawn from Siberia until April, 1920. Out of this expedition grew counter claims which the Soviets have always been ready to use to counter American debt and damage claims.

Charles Evans Hughes, as Secretary of State, enunciated the Harding administration's policy toward the Soviets by declaring that it was "idle to expect resumption of trade until the economic bases of production are securely established."

Safety Demanded.

"Production," he said, "is conditioned upon the safety of life, the recognition of firm guarantees of private property, the sanctity of contract, and the rights of free labor. If fundamental changes are contemplated. . .this government will be glad to have convincing evidence of the consumation of such changes . . . Until this evidence is supplied, this government is unable to perceive that there is any proper basis for considering trade relations."

In his message to Congress, on December 6, 1923, President Coolidge declared:

"Our Government does not propose . . . to enter into relations with another regime which refuses to recognize the sanctity of international obligations. I do not propose to barter away for the privilege of trade any of the cherished rights of humanity. I do not propose to make merchandise of any American principles. These rights and principles must go wherever the sanctions of our Government go."

Soviet Rebuffed.

He added, "Whenever the active spirit of enmity to our institutions is abated; whenever there appear works meet for repentance, our country ought to be the first to go to the economic and moral rescue of Russia."

When the Soviet foreign commissar, interpreting this as a friendly advance, cabled the White House proposing negotiations, Secretary Hughes, on December 18, demanded that Moscow first "restore the confiscated property of American citizens," and repeal the "decree repudiating Russia's obligations to this country," and added that "most serious is the continued propaganda to overthrow the institutions of this country."

In 1926, Litvinoff announced that the Soviet was ready to negotiate for settlement of the loan advanced to Kerensky if the United States would consider Soviet counterclaims growing out of the Archangel expedition, but that came to nothing. Litvinoff's next attitude was one of indignant anger when Secretary of State Stimson, in July, 1929, admonished Moscow of its obligations under the Kellogg pact at the time of the Sino-Soviet conflict over the Eastern Manchurian Railway.

Hostility Dwindles.

Until Mr. Roosevelt entered the White House, without having expressed his views on recognition during the campaign, relations remained unimproved, but the cotton and machinery trade by that time had erased much of the congressional hostility.

Announcement by President Roosevelt of impending conversations with Russia which may lead to recognition may have a bearing on the farm situation. It is generally agreed, as Peek said, that much of the farmers' trouble has resulted from loss of foreign markets. Trade agreements with Russia are expected to open up a new outlet and thus assist in relieving surpluses.

The Soviets repudiated an estimated $7,113,000,000 of foreign debt. America's share comes to about $284,000,000, composed mainly of the Kerensky loans with interest. In addition, the National City Bank in the early days of the World War had advanced $86,000,000 to the imperial government, and $11,000,000 of czarist loans were sold to the American public in 1916.

American investment in Russian enterprises at the time of the revolution were estimated at about $60,000,000. In 1921, Congress appropriated $24,000,000 for famine relief in Russia and as much more was privately contributed by Americans.

Business Seals Backed.

Throughout the long period of nonrecognition, American business has proceeded with Russia, with the full approval of the American Government. In the year ended September 30, 1930, Soviet trade organizations bought $114,399,000 worth of American goods. Meanwhile many American experts and advisers were imported by the Soviets, notably Ralph Budd, railroad expert; Thomas Campbell, Montana wheat grower; Col. Hugh I Cooper and scores of other engineers.

In the decade from 1920 to 1930 American trade with Russia expanded to several times the volume before the war, despite the absence of diplomatic relations. The year 1930 was the peak. In 1931 the volume of goods sold to Russia declined to $103,000,000, then dropped off sharply in 1932. But for the years 1926-1931 the Russian trade gave the United States a favorable trade balance aggregating $390,878,000.

Col. Cooper, speaking as president of the American-Russian Chamber of Commerce, has predicted that recognition would be followed by huge trade expansion up to "at least $1,000,000,000 worth of goods" a year.

R. F. C. Ponders Credit.

Lately the R. F. C. has been pondering a $75,000,000 credit to enable Russia to buy cotton and other goods, and the arrangement of a large credit to finance purchases of commodities depressing prices in the revolt-ridden regions of this country is one of the points to come up when Mr. Roosevelt meets M. Lituinoff in the White House.

The State Department view is that the debts can be disposed of without serious complications, though other governments have had no success in collecting much on the prerevolution account. This Administration puts little stress on the old problem of anticapitalistic propaganda, particularly in view of Soviet concentration on a second five-year program instead of on world revolution.

A possible formula for dealing with debts is seen in the Soviet arrangement to pay excessive interest on French loans, the excess going to holders of old Russian bonds. The General Electric Co. obtained part repayment of a claim through a bonus on contracts with the Soviet. Similarly, British and American oil companies obtained 5 per cent bonuses on oil contracts and applied the bonuses to their old claims.

Claims of Russia.

As a counter to the American Government claim—and its only one—of $187,000,000 loaned to Kerensky, the Soviets presumably will claim several hundred million dollars' damage resulting from the Archangel and Siberian expeditions. This may prove to be the hardest nut to crack in the forthcoming negotiations.

Most of all, however, the Roosevelt Administration aspires to trade agreements which would drain off surplus goods now depressing the American market. Politically, the move at this time is calculated to aid and if possible appease the rebellious West.

officials delved into the legal aspects of interfering with interstate commerce. The use of guardsmen to prevent elevators from loading wheat for shipments was believed more likely.

Statisticians estimated 58,000,000 bushels of wheat were in the State, including 44,000,000 on farms.

"Follow Leader"—Berry.

Pierre, S. Dak., Oct. 20 (AP).—Taking an opposite view on the national recovery program from Gov. Charles W. Bryan of Nebraska, Gov. Tom Berry of South Dakota today came to the support of the national administration with a declaration that "we should follow the leader" in the present crisis.

Berry, although admitting that everything in the recovery program did not coincide with his views, said "this is no time to withdraw support from the movement."

"If we all followed our own ideas we would get nowhere," the executive said. "We should give the national recovery program a thorough trial before quitting. We should follow the leader even though his leadership takes us off the trail occasionally."

Berry agreed with Gov. Bryan that speedy relief was needed for the farmers of the Midwest States but declared that it could not be accomplished if each State "goes its own way."

Landon Raps Politics.

Manhattan, Kans., Oct. 20 (AP).—Gov. Alf M. Landon, of Kansas, said today the person best capable of solving farm difficulties was the farmer himself "when he is permitted to quit relying on the offers of statesmen to save him and is given the opportunity to apply his own better judgment."

Gov. Landon addressed a land utilization conference at Kansas State College.

"It seems to me," said the governor, "that one weakness inherent in all the programs offered for agriculture is that the remedies are sporadic, and designed to meet temporary emergencies. It seems that many of these panaceas are designed for dramatic popular appeal rather than the slow process leading to better agricultural life.

"Personally, I feel that government should cooperate in a long time and low interest rate farm credit program."

Farm Leader Aloof.

Columbia, Mo., Oct. 20 (AP).—Russell J. Rosier, secretary of the Missouri Farmers Association, said today the National Farm Holiday strike called for tomorrow was "not the right way to get relief."

William Hirth, president, attended the meeting at Des Moines last spring when a strike was first suggested and at that time stated: "We do not believe that the idea of withholding farm commodities from the market in the hope of raising prices is practical."

Montana Strike Called.

Billings, Mont., Oct. 20 (AP).—The Montana Holiday Association today was called to participate in the national farm strike, starting Saturday.

Tom Horsford, of Circle, Mont., president, predicted more than 15,000 of the State's 40,000 farmers will obey.

He warned against the use of force.

Oklahoma Strike Called.

Vinita, Okla., Oct. 20 (AP).—R. L. Bickerd, State president of the Farmers Holiday Association, today directed members in Oklahoma to strike tomorrow.

Sees Long Fight.

Des Moines, Iowa, Oct. 20 (AP). Milo Reno, president of the National Farmers Holiday Association, tonight predicted a "long, drawn-out battle" in the National farm strike proclaimed to start tomorrow, and urged farmers to make "a supreme effort to obtain their rights without trouble."

As a last resort, he said, "holiday" farmers should withdraw support from business, labor and agricultural organizations which fail to cooperate.

Reno said chances of success in the strike were "greater than ever before."

He said he was preparing letters to the more than 20 State presidents of holiday associations.

The letter will urge organization councils of defense to obtain arbitration of form mortgage foreclosure actions.

A peaceful withholding of farm produce from the market is "perhaps the only solution outside of revolution" for declining farm prices, Reno asserted.

Reno said his letter will ask that holiday leaders present their information to other groups of industry, that they carry their campaign into the churches and schools, and that, as a last resort, they use what he termed a weapon of the NRA, "nonsupport of noncooperative business firms and other organizations."

Cooney Backs President.

Chicago, Oct. 20 (AP).—Gov. Frank Cooney of Montana said he planned to "go along with the President" when questioned today if he was in sympathy with officials of other States in the farm situation.

Gov. Cooney was en route home after a month in Washington, where he conferred with Federal officials about his State's relief problems.

Banks Bolster Soviet Credit In Wall Street

Seek to Increase Sales; Plan Discounts for Amtorg Corp.

(Copyright, 1933, by The Associated Press.)

New York, Oct. 20.—With the announcement of the forthcoming Roosevelt-Litvinoff recognition conversations, it was learned authoritatively tonight that several Wall street banks are preparing to ease credit immediately for increased Soviet sales by discounting acceptances of the Amtorg Trading Corporation.

In addition to discounts—something that Wall street has shied away from since the Soviet repudiation of debts—it was learned the banks stand ready to make loans direct to Amtorg, the Russian trading agency.

One of the largest of the financial institutions has already notified several industries engaged in trade with Russia of its discounting intention.

Predict U. S. Credit.

It was also felt certain in informed quarters here that the Washington conversations between the President and the Soviet commissar for foreign affairs will lead to a heavy extension of Federal credit.

While it was thought likely this will eventually take the form of a Government guarantee on Soviet sales—as in the case of several European countries—it appeared the credit extension would first come through direct loans from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

While cotton has assumed a dominance in recent credit negotiations for a $50,000,000 loan from the R. F. C. to Amtorg—which have lain dormant with the imminence of today's developments — manufacturers of heavy industrial equipment probably will benefit most from easier credit to the Soviet Union.

Hope for Peak Sales.

Among those who have traded with the Soviet Union in the past, the view was held that it is not too much to expect that sales within the next few years should again reach the peak period of 1930—when America exported goods to the value of $132,000,000 to Russia.

In 1932 the United States exports totaled only slightly more than $15,000,000.

Geneva Backs Accord Move

Sees Roosevelt Bringing Soviet Into Comity of Nations.

Geneva, Oct. 20 (AP).—Steps of the American Government opening the way for recognition of Russia were regarded here tonight as definitely bringing the Soviet Union back into the comity of nations, which the powers tried to do at conferences in Genoa and The Hague.

Russia has gradually enlarged the scope of Soviet cooperation with the League of Nations, for which Arthur Henderson, president of the World Disarmament Conference, recently expressed praised.

It was recalled that Russia has recently negotiated nonaggression pacts with other nations in keeping with the aims of the league.

With President Roosevelt's overture to Russia coming after Germany's withdrawal from the disarmament conference and the league, comments were heard indicating that while Germany is increasing her isolation, Russia is losing hers.

The opinion was expressed that if Russia joins the league such action would powerfully offset the departure of Japan and Germany.

Ambassador

Selection Would Be Way to Voice Recognition.

(Associated Press.)

State Department experts on delicate questions of recognition last night were of the opinion that if and when this country should recognize Soviet Russia the formal announcement might take the form of the appointment of an ambassador.

Diplomatic recognition of one country by another may take any one of severa forms, the general rule being that any act showing clearly an "intent to recognize" might constitute recognition.

Recognition might take the form of a statement from one country to another, expressing this intent, or the signing by the two countries of a bilateral treaty.

The most definite form, however, generally is considered the appointment of an ambassador.

No congressional action is necessary.

It's Litvinoff!

Favored Over "Litvinof" and "Litvinov."

The name of Maxim Litvinoff, Russia's envoy in search of American recognition, is spelled variously in English "Litvinoff," "Litvinof" and "Litvinov" in an effort to translate the Russian characters, the Associated Press reports.

The first version, with the "off" ending, is generally preferred, however, as representing more nearly the actual Russian pronunciation.

Litvinoff Blunt, Stocky, Looks Like Banker

Driving Force in Soviet Foreign Office Is 57; Backs Arm Cuts.

(Associated Press.)

Maxim Litvinoff, spokesman for the Russian government in the forthcoming negotiations with President Roosevelt, is a blunt-spoken man who for 15 years has been the driving force in the Moscow foreign office.

A short, stocky man of 57, who looks more like a banker than a diplomat, Litvinoff has a round face made rounder by nose glasses, and an unruly shock of light curly hair.

He was assistant to George Tchitcherin, commissar for foreign affairs, for 11 years, but actually directed foreign policy most of the time because the commissar was in ill health. Four years ago, Tchitcherin retired and Litvinoff took his place.

Nonaggression pacts with most of Russia's neighbors have been negotiated by Litvinoff. He has attended a dozen international conferences. He has been a supporter of arms reduction.

He was born in Dielstok, now a part of Poland, of Jewish parents. Litvinoff is a name assumed in the years when he was a refugee from Russia because of his revolutionary activities. His real name is said to have been Finkelstein.

He entered the old Russian army as a volunteer and became interested in Marxism while he was a soldier. He was banished to Siberia and escaped.

Litvinoff's wife is a cultured Englishwoman. She was formerly Miss Ivy Low, niece of Sir Maurice Low, who served as Washington correspondent of a London newspaper for many years.

Pittman Silent.

Among those who refused to comment yesterday on Mr. Roosevelt's action: Chairman Pittman, of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, and Senator Fletcher (Democrat), Florida.

Senator J. Hamilton Lewis (Democrat), Illinois—"Until the Senate has before it the report of a committee sent to Russia to make a satisfactory investigation of general conditions, and particularly of financial and economic conditions, we can have no real opinion of the true state of affairs in that country. I do not feel that the Government, at this time, without any officially recognized agency in Russia, has any real source of information."

Mrs. Amos A. Fries, National Defense Council — "The danger in recognition of Russia lies in the fact that every city in this country will become a center of Communist propaganda against our Government—propaganda which is certain to wreck any government. Communistic councils to the number of 400 or 500 would be established in the United States as so many more centers of trouble. We sincerely hope that there will be no recognition of Russia."

Norris Praises Move.

Senator George W. Norris, informed by the Associated Press at his home, McCook, Nebr., that President Roosevelt had opened negotiations, said he was "glad to hear it."

"I hope," he said, "the conference results in the recognition of Russia. I don't see any reason why we shouldn't recognize Russia."

Senator Borah, former chairman of the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations, yesterday praised the action of President Roosevelt, the Associated Press said. Accomplishment of the object would be "a stroke of genius," he said.

"It would be in accord with the President's initiative and courage, more than once disclosed in great emergencies," he added, "if he should at this time, while the world is tense with fear and doubt, bring together two great nations so long estranged.

"To restore amity between 120,000,000 people, on one hand, and 160,000,000, on the other, is a thing of supreme moment in the cause of peace at any time. But at this time of uneasiness it would be nothing less than a stroke of genius.

Borah Lauds Tolerance.

"The cause of peace has been loaded down for 15 years with speeches, resolutions and sentimental inaction. It would be great to have, especially at this particular time, at least one realistic move toward a friendlier and more tolerant world."

President William Green of the American Federation of Labor said he still had "faith in the President," believing that before recognizing Russia Mr. Roosevelt would insist that the Third Internationale cease attempting to promote "world revolution through force and violence."

ment abroad on ground that it is now being produced here.

On the other hand, the Soviet preference for American equipment and raw materials in general because of their superior quality is expected to increase the volume of Russian purchases in the United States, even though they are held to essential requirements.

Furthermore, the mere fact of formal intercourse between the United States and the U. S. S. R., it is believed here, will have the effect of a restraining influence on the sometimes troubled relations between Tokyo and Moscow.

The United States and Japan are the only great powers not recognizing Soviet Russia.

Active in Treaties.

Litvinoff has been people's commissar for foreign affairs since July, 1930. He is known for his efforts in disarmament negotiations at Geneva and for a series of bilateral and multilateral nonaggression treaties which he has concluded in recent years with neighboring nations.

Three questions on which Washington based a previous policy of nonrecognition are likely to form the chief basis for the coming discussions.

They are repudiation of prerevolutionary Russia's debts to America, amounting to approximately $300,000,000; seizure of the property of some American companies during the bolshevist nationalization process, and the question of Communist propaganda.

Moscow has repeatedly expressed a willingness to discuss the questions at issue, but has taken the position in the past that a necessary part of any such discussions must be recognition by the United States of Russia's counter claims—amounting to a sum which has never been stated here—for damages growing out of American intervention.

Claims Pigeonholed.

Most of the other powers who participated in the intervention have refused to accept financial responsibility for such action, but found it convenient to "pigeonhole" their own debt claims against Russia.

On the other hand, the Soviet Union's desire for a large loan or long-term credits may pave the way for the settlement under which American holders of securities during the czarist and Kerensky regime may ultimately realize something from the investments, now worthless, and American businessmen whose property was seized may be reimbursed to some extent.

As to the question of Communist propaganda, Russia has made the mutual pledge in recognition treaties with other powers not to interfere with their internal affairs.

Limits for Moscow.

There is good reason to suppose that is as far as Moscow is prepared to go in any formal relationship with Washington.

Meanwhile, in addition to paving the way for possible long-term credits in the United States, which would permit the government to purchase equipment and raw materials, Moscow looks confidently to a rapproachement with Washington to strengthen peace in the Far East, particularly as far as Japan is concerned, for Moscow is known to look on Nippon as a potential enemy.

Clerk Routs Animal, and Royal Buying Goes On.

Fakenham, Norfolk, Eng., Oct. 20 (AP).—A young bull, frightened by traffic, today rushed into a small shop where Queen Mary was inspecting goods.

The animal was within a few feet of her majesty when a clerk dashed to the rescue and drove it outside.

The princess royal and the ladies in waiting were with the queen, who was much amused at the incident and continued her shopping.

gust 5, 1931. The syndicate sold Chase stock for the $3,471,340 it cost them, and had 539 shares remaining, Wiggin said.

He said the accounts "served their purpose by stabilizing the market."

"That's another way of saying they created a public appearance of a steady demand for the stock," Pecora said.

The witness would not concede that buying and selling through trading accounts was the same as "wash sales" when pressed on this score by Pecora.

Pecora asked if he favored legislation requiring the fullest publicity of "trading account" operations.

"Let me think that one over," Wiggin said. "That's a big order."

Then, after a few moments reflection:

"It wouldn't do any harm."

Earlier yesterday Pecora disclosed the committee will inquire into alleged operation of a "whisky pool" to boost alcohol issue prices. A report on the pool already has been filed with investigators in New York, by Richard Whitney, president of the New York Stock Exchange, Pecora said.

Death Claims H. W. Miller, 65

Mr. Miller was born in Raleigh, N. C., August 8, 1868, and was educated in the public schools there. He began his career as a delivery clerk for the Richmond and Lanville Railroad and advanced to become assistant to the first vice president at Raleigh. He served as assistant to the president from 1910 to 1915. In March, 1920, he came to Washington as a vice president. Since January, 1921, he has been vice president in charge of operations. He was vice president of several affiliates.

Mr. Miller was a member of the Chevy Chase Club and an Episcopalian.

San Franciscans Urge Recognition

Chamber Wires Roosevelt Urging Quick Action.

San Francisco, Oct. 20 (AP).—A resolution, asking President Roosevelt to give speedy recognition to the Russian Soviet government, was telegraphed to Washington today by the directors of the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce.

The resolution said that the Pacific Coast "stands to gain materially through the development of trade relations with Asiatic Russia."

3-Power Alliance Urged by French

Paris, Oct. 20 (AP).—French senators urged their government tonight to make a three-power alliance of France, Great Britain and Italy to supplant the peace pact those nations signed last July with Germany.

It was considered likely, meanwhile, that a French plan to draft immediately a disarmament convention, regardless of the absence of the Reich, will be abandoned.

One reason cited for this probability was the theory among some Britons and Americans that the Germans will return to Geneva after the excitement of a German plebiscite on the foreign policy subsides.

Senators Sift Gifts to Ship Board Chief

Justice Inquiry Died in 1930 at White House Committee Hears.

A report on the gifts, loans, and other favors granted to a former Shipping Board employe by Henry Herberman, president of the Export Steamship Co., which a Department of Justice investigator said "might possibly constitute criminal acts," was never acted upon after it had been forwarded to the White House in 1930, it was revealed yesterday before a special Senate committee investigating ocean mail contracts.

The committee, headed by Senator Black (Democrat), Alabama, questioned three witnesses about gifts of 24 head of cattle valued at $10,000, and five blooded pigs to A. W. Pattiani, father-in-law of R. D. Gatewood, former director of the division of maintenance and repairs of the Shipping Board. It was brought out also that Herberman had forwarded $12,217 to take over the mortgage on the father-in-law's California ranch.

Evidence was then given that from 1924 to 1927 the Shipping Board spent $1,171,432 for repairs on the 18 ships sold to the Export lines, and $325,465 for betterments.

V. W. Hughes, Department of Justice investigator, told the committee that in 1930 he had made an investigation of the Gatewood-Herberman relations and had forwarded his report to the then Attorney General, William D. Mitchell.

H. I. Cone, former Shipping Board member, previously told the committee he had "practically brought charges against Gatewood and Herberman," and that his letter, protesting Herberman's large allowance for maintenance and repairs from Gatewood had been instrumental in starting the Department of Justice investigation.

Called Transaction "Charity."

However, he said, he never saw the report of the investigation, although he understood from T. V. O'Connor, then Shipping Board chairman, that it had been forwarded to the White House, and that it was decided no further action was to be taken. Gatewood continued in the board's employ, he said.

Cone, Hughes and Herberman, who took the stand for a short time, testified that in 1927 Herberman sent $12,217 to California to take over the mortgage on the Pattiani farm. The deed was made out in the name of Joseph Schultz, who was identified as Herberman's chauffeur.

"Pattiani" has been permitted to remain on the farm with no expense whatever to him since that time. No rent, interest or any other charge is assessed against Pattiani.

"In addition, Herberman purchased 24 head of cattle from Robert M. King, of the Unjon and Virginia Stevedoring companies, in 1924, and Herberman immediately shipped these cattle gratuitously to Pattiani.

"Gatewood stated that he thought Herberman owned the cattle and merely wanted to dispose of them. Herberman, when interrogated with regard to this transaction, stated he had sent these cattle as an act of charity.

"It is shown by the record that the ships sold to Henry Herberman by the Shipping Board were placed and maintained in the very best of repair by the board, Gatewood at that time being in charge of said repairs."

Herberman, attended by his physician, who kept his eye glued to his patient as he answered questions in a weak, husky voice, denied having made certain loans to Gatewood about which Chairman Black quizzed him.

Gatewood is now in France on his second honeymoon. Herberman said, "He doesn't owe me a cent."

Senator Black then surprised the witness by asking him about a letter he had received from Gatewood within the last ten days.

"Why didn't you bring that letter?" asked Black. "The committee asked for all your correspondence with Gatewood."

"I didn't think you would want it," answered the witness.

"It wasn't because you didn't think we knew about it?" retorted teh senator.

The first witness of the day was Edwin H. Duff, Washington representative of the American Steamship Owners Association, who denied having lobbied in Congress against the Black amendment providing salary reductions for operators awarded mail contracts.

Senator Black introduced a letter written by Duff to R. J. Baker, secretary of the Steamship Owners Association, in which he said he had a "tip" on the House-Senate conference on the amendment.

"Who gave you the tip?" asked Black.

"I think I got it from Mr. Glover."

Glover was former Assistant Postmaster General.

Duff testified that his income, including $600 a month paid him by the Steamship Owners Association, sometimes was as high as $40,000 or $50,000 a year. He has as clients various individual steamship operators.

The hearing was adjourned until Tuesday when officials of the Black Diamond Steamship Co. will be recalled.

Sugar Fight Vital, Says Gov. Blood

Beet Men Seek Decent Living, He Declares.

The fight of Western sugar-beet growers for stabilization of the sugar industry is a fight for maintenance of a decent standard of living for the farmers of irrigated lands of the West, Gov. Henry H. Blood, of Utah, declared here yesterday.

"We must have the Western sugar industry on a basis on which we can keep our plants running," he said in commenting on proposals for sugar stabilization.

$1,945,235 Fixed as Goal In Chest Drive

Government Relief Help Held Reason for $500,000 Cut.

The Washington Community Chest goal this year will be $1,945,235.93, approximately $500,000 less than last year.

Last year a goal of $2,419,787 was set.

Several weeks ago Elwood Street, Chest director, said that total collections this year would be smaller because the Government is contributing largely to unemployment relief.

Street informed members of the group solicitation committee that 80 per cent of those needing relief are domestic servants who lost their jobs as a result of the economy act's effect on U. S. employes' budgets.

Another factor in the increased relief demands is the number of out-of-town workers brought here by contractors and who later became jobless, Street said.

Only the emergency phase of the relief situation has been taken over by the Federal Government. The care of the sick, aged, injured and orphans remains a Chest problem, he pointed out.

The amount to be alloted various activities under the Chest, as set forth by the budget committee:

Case work for dependent families and individuals	$368,500.00
Institutional care for dependent children and adults	317,409.00
Hospitals	363,634.19
Health organizations	206,226.30
Character building agencies	332,089.28
Community cooperation	178,537.35
	$1,768,396.30
Shrinkage and emergency 10 per cent	176,839.63
Total needed	$1,945,235.93

Two new organizations will be admitted to the Chest this year. They are the Washington Heart Association and the Georgetown Boys Club.

Collections this year are behind those for last year, L. J. Roberts, assistant treasurer, reported.

Talks Freely About England.

But about England he could talk and did.

"England is getting on very well. Improvement certainly is well set in there. The heavy industries are showing improvement and the whole feeling there is that things are better and improving."

The observations, he said, were based on facts gathered by the House of Morgan in England.

"We get figures on improvement in trade and increase in employment, and it is marked," he said. "The seasonal unemployment has not taken place. The railroads have shown an improvement and the basic industries are better."

Loves Grouse Shooting.

"Isn't that a good sign for all of us?" he was asked.

"Do you want me to prophesy?"

"Yes."

"I won't prophesy. I prefer to prophesy after the event."

As to Germany's defection from the League of Nations and Disarmament Conference, "Universal statesmanship is not my business," he said.

He replied, "That's interesting," when told of reports the United States was about to recognize Russia. About the current inquiry into salaries of bankers and corporation heads, "I'll not comment."

About grouse shooting, however, he expressed enthusiasm.

"Lovely! There you have those beautiful rolling, heather-covered hills and passing clouds. It is the grandest sport there is. Of course, a good duck shoot is nice, too," he added.

Mansion Doors Barred Since Overthrow of Kerensky.

The question of what to do with the huge empty palace that formerly was the Russian Embassy is one of the many minor details to be ironed out in connection with American recognition of Soviet Russia.

Once famed for the lavishness of its social affairs, the gaunt structure at 1119-25 Sixteneth street has been deserted save for a caretaker and his family for almost 16 years. With doors and windows barred to prying eyes, it has stood as a symbol of another era—the day of Russian imperial splendor.

The deserted embassy has retained a peculiar status for the last quarter of a century. The American Government has held that it belonged to the Russian nation, but that the Soviet government had no control over it because the United States had not recognized the Soviet regime.

No Funds for Repairs.

Since the departure of the last Russian Ambassador, Boris Bakhmeteff, the building has been in the custody of Serge Ughet, former financial attache, now living in New York. He has been the official representative of the Russian nation in the ownership, but he has been without authority or funds to make repairs.

For the first eight years after the embassy was closed, the old caretaker remained as the sole resident. Eight years ago, however, he gave up the post and was succeeded by Alexander I. Krynitsky, who came to Washington during the Kerensky regime with a commission to buy munitions.

Krynitsky, who for years worked as a metallurgist at the Bureau of Standards, while his pretty wife worked as a translator at the Department of Commerce, has occupied the chancery on a no-cost-no-pay basis.

Built 30 Years Ago.

The embassy was built about 30 years ago by Mrs. George M. Pullman, wife of the builder of sleeping cars. It was designed with large reception halls for entertaining on a large scale. For some reason, however, Mrs. Pullman never occupied the home, and shortly sold it to John Hays Hammond, noted engineer. He likewise failed to occupy it, and sold it to the Russian government, which added a chancery and garden.

The cost of the original building was reported to be $500,000, while the subsequent sale prices were in the neighborhood of $750,000. Additions by the Russian government brought its prewar value close to $1,000,000.

Ambassador George Bakhmeteff was the first to occupy the embassy, and it was during his occupancy that Russia set the pace for splendor in diplomatic society.

Following the revolution another Bakhmeteff took charge in June, 1917, and the ambassadorial functions forthwith assumed a much more democratic aspect. Despite the similarity of names the two ambassadors were unrelated. The latter was allowed to hold his post a bare six months because of the overthrow of the Kerensky regime.

Revised Retail Code Drafted

Abolition of Cost-Plus Plan Hinted; Roosevelt Gets Document.

Prospects that President Roosevelt will sign a retail code which does not contain original provisions compelling merchants to sell at not less than cost plus 10 per cent were increased last night when a modified code was placed before him by Donald Richberg, NRA chief counsel.

The President, in view of conflicting demands, ordered a compromise that would be at least partly satisfactory to all parties.

One solution proposed by Recovery Administrator Johnson was to substitute for the cost-plus feature a provision which merely would prevent merchants from selling below cost.

Opponents of the cost-plus idea—and there are many within the administration—said President Roosevelt would hesitate before approving cost-plus guarantees unless some arrangement could be evolved which would give farmers similar protection.

Farm Strikes New to U. S., First in 1932

Rapid Growth Features History of Holiday Association.

The National Farmers Holiday Association, which has called a National strike of farmers to obtain higher prices, has had a stormy career.

It began six years ago, but did not take form until last year, when an organization was perfected in Iowa. Since then it has spread to ten Midwest States and claims 2,000,000 members. It is one of several large farm organizations.

The organization sprang from a resolution adopted by the corn belt committee of the National Farmers Union in 1927, according to Milo Reno, of Des Moines, its leader. The resolution said:

"If we can not obtain justice by legislation, the time will have arrived when no other course remains than organized refusal to deliver the products of the farm at less than production costs.

Strikes Started in 1932.

The first strike was called August 15, 1932, in Iowa, and was the beginning of strife between Iowa farmers and State authorities. In April, 1932, ten northwest Iowa farmers were arrested following the arrival of National Guard and martial law in Plymouth and Crawford Counties. They were alleged to have taken parts in riots. The association disclaimed responsibility for any violence.

In May, 1932, Judge C. C. Bradley was manhandled by a Lemars, Iowa, mob when he refused to stop a sheriff's sale of a farmer's property.

The strike spread. In October, 1932, a farmer picket was killed near Canby, Minn., by a farmer attempting to run farm produce through a blockade. At Atlanta, Ga., a milk war was marked by outbreaks. As a result of the milk strike the basic price to farmers and dairymen was raised in that section.

Foreclosure Actions Deferred.

In May, 1933, the milk holiday reached its peak, when 400 Wisconsin farmers battled truckmen in a cloud of tear gas to keep milk from being shipped to Chicago. Several were seriously injured.

The peak of the Iowa situation was reached in March, 1932, when a crowd of 3,000 holiday members marched on the Iowa Statehouse to voice demands for higher prices and a moratorium on foreclosures.

The result was that Gov. Herring asked foreclosures be stopped voluntarily by insurance companies and banks. Later the Iowa Legislature provided for continuing foreclosure actions until 1935.

A milk strike was staged near New York City in October, 1932. The strike carried on by more than 600 producers, was instituted to combat a price-cutting war. Many disturbances occurred.

California Man Awarded Nobel Medicine Prize

Dr. Thomas Hunt Morgan, of Pasadena, Honored for Research.

Stockholm, Oct. 20 (AP).—The 1933 Nobel prize for medicine was awarded tonight to Dr. Thomas Hunt Morgan, of Pasadena, Calif., prominent zoologist.

Dr. Morgan has written a number of works on heredity, sex and embryological subjects.

The award was made in recognition of Dr. Morgan's discoveries concerning the eugenic functions of chromosomes.

Dr. Morgan is former professor of zoology at Columbia University.

In 1924 he was awarded the Darwin medal of the Royal Society in London for work in zoology and especially for research in heredity and cytology. In 1931 he was elected a member of the French Academy of Sciences.

Dr. Morgan is chairman of the division of biology in charge of the William G. Kerchkoff laboratories of the biological sciences of the California Institute of Technology. His best known work perhaps is that of genetics, he being considered one of the foremost scientists in this field.

He was born in Lexington, Ky., September 25, 1866, and educated at the State College of Kentucky and later at Johns Hopkins University. For four years, 1927-31, Dr. Morgan was president of the National Academy of Sciences, and in 1930 served as president of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

Roosevelt Urged To Shame Lynching

President Roosevelt was urged yesterday to "speak out against this terrible curse of lynching" in a letter addressed to him by the Interdenominational Ministers Alliance of Washington.

The alliance, representing 150 congregations in Washington and vicinity, expressed itself as bowing its heads "in humiliation and shame" because it is "a part of this American republic which seems to condone such dastardly deeds as lynching within 100 miles of the Capitol."

The President was asked to condemn the lynching of George Armwood, colored, Wednesday night at Princess Anne, Md.

Beer Yields $75,000,000 In Six Months

Internal Revenue Totals Show Big Tax Gains Over Last Year.

(Associated Press.)

In the first six months of legalized beer, taxes enriched the Treasury by $74,944,483.

This was disclosed yesterday by publication of Treasury figures bringing collections up to October 1. In addition to the tax on beer, the Government realized in the six-month period $105,121 from 3.2 wine and $6,164,967 from special taxes on brewers and distributors.

The statistics also revealed total internal revenue collections of $613,258,977 for the first quarter of the current fiscal year, an increase of $255,150,912 over the corresponding period of a year ago.

September Shows Big Gain.

For the month of September, receipts aggregated $318,985,678, a total of $102,504,391 greater than in September, 1932, and $155,828,076 more than in August, 1933.

Of the latter increase, $120,251,528 was accounted for by a jump in income tax collections, due to the regular quarterly payments in September.

If receipts from beer taxes continue at the present rate for the next six months, the first year of the legalized brew will show collections from this source of about $150,000,000.

When the measure was pending in Congress the Treasury estimated revenue at $125,000,000 to $150,000,000 annually, while other estimates ranged as high as $225,000,000.

Income Taxes Drop.

Of the general increase between August and September of this year there was, in addition to the jump in income taxes, a rise of $43,653,028 to a total of $53,617,188 in the tax on capital stock under the recovery act.

For the first quarter of the current fiscal year income tax collections dropped $14,326,085 as compared with the same period last year. However, stamp taxes rose $11,059,487, excise taxes $69,259,742, tobacco taxes $5,713,426 and miscellaneous taxes $6,430,221.

Roosevelt Farm Appeal on Radio

dered sheriffs to stop shipments of wheat from the State by refusing to permit elevators to load grain. He promised assistance of the National Guard if necessary. Railroads continue to accept wheat shipments, explaining that Interstate Commerce Commission rules compelled them.

In Oklahoma, R. L. Bickerd, State president of the Holiday Association, ordered his followers to strike today. In Montana the State organization asserted that 15,000 of the State's 40,000 farmers would obey the strike edict.

Wisconsin and upper Michigan farmers will meet next Wednesday to decide their course in the strike. Members of the Wisconsin cooperative milk pool are expected to strike.

Wheat Prices Advance.

Gov. Tom Berry of South Dakota urged speedy relief, but at the same time he advised them to "follow the leader" and support Mr. Roosevelt.

Wheat prices at Chicago advanced 2 to 4⅛ cents above Thursday's close, influenced largely by buying of wheat for the Government, reports of price-fixing schemes, and anticipation of recognition of Russia.

A definite announcement of administration plans for meeting the farm crisis is expected soon. On leaving the Cabinet meeting, Secretary Wallace said:

"We will do everything we possibly can. I thing we will have something to announce shortly."

The statement from the White House that the administration has not changed its policy in regard to price-fixing followed an assertion by Representative Truax, of Ohio, after a conference with the President, that the President was ready to act in the farm crisis. Truax said he had proposed a price-fixing program to include minimum prices of $1 a bushel for wheat, 7 cents a pound for hogs and 10 cents a pound for cattle.

Formal statements concerning the farm revolt were made by Gen. Johnson, NRA administrator, and George N. Peek, administrator of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration. The NRA was brought into the farm difficulties through the resignation of Keith Neville, president of the Nebraska State Recovery Board. Neville is a former Governor of Nebraska.

Neville Asked to Reconsider.

Neville announced he was out of sympathy with the manner in which the recovery program was being conducted in his State. Gen. Johnson asked him to reconsider, but he refused. Following his refusal, Gen. Johnson said:

"The Nebraska developments are, of course, of interest to NRA, as everything that tends to delay general prosperity must be, but I do not see how the NRA can do anything about it. I have no further information than is contained in the newspaper reports and, of course, the resignation of Mr. Keith Neville, president of the Nebraska State Recovery Board, whose letter is before me.

"I have no quarrel with him for resigning, as he announces himself out of sympathy with the manner in which the program is being conducted in such States as Nebraska.

"He and Gov. Bryan complain because they say the farmer is not getting the relief he expected under the agricultural and the recovery acts, and because the public works program is not in full operation. All of these are parts of the general program. That they have not all moved forward at the same pace is perhaps as regrettable as unavoidable. We must assume that all of the departments of the recovery movement are doing their utmost. When everything is in full swing I am quite sure the farmers' discontent will vanish, because the national recovery movement was based on the theory of improvement in the condition of everybody.

Peek Asks "Patience."

"Such manifestations of impatience as the recent events in the Middle West are more or less natural. However, when the whole plan is in full operation I am quite sure that the forebodings expressed in the recent enunciations will be unfounded."

Peek's statement expressed sympathy with farmers but asserted fundamental adjustments in agriculture are essential before extensive relief to farmers will be possible.

"All these people are trying to do is to save their homes," Peek said. "I, too, would fight to hold my home. We have been warning the East for 12 years that things like this would happen unless the incomes of farmers were increased.

"We have been fighting to raise farm prices, and also to hold down supply so as to support higher prices and bring permanent recovery rather than merely invite new surpluses and new disaster.

"Every experiment ever made to boost prices without reference to continued surpluses has ended in greater depression for agriculture. The loss of our foreign markets for wheat and pork, with the resulting low prices, are unpleasant facts, but, nevertheless, they are facts which we must have courage to face.

"We are moving as rapidly as it is humanly possible, but it should be recalled that the depression did not come overnight. It was years in developing. Complete and sustained recovery can not be brought by waving a magic wand."

Seriousness of the farm situation was emphasized by Senator Nye, of North Dakota, who said he understood leaders of organized farmers are contemplating invasion of towns in the Middle West to tear down the NRA eagle from stores. He said "the Blue Eagle has become a red flag" to poverty-stricken farmers.

"The Blue Eagle has become an indication of higher prices for things farmers must buy while their products are still selling far below production costs," he said.

He said he would not argue the constitutionality of Gov. Langer's proclamation prohibiting shipments of wheat from North Dakota, but he approved the theory and said cooperation of other large wheat States would permit control of the wheat markets.

A private meeting of farm organization leaders and members of Congress has been called for next Tuesday to discuss a program designed to ease property debts through currency inflation and the establishment of Government banks.

The National Farmers' Union, the National Grange and the Farm Bureau Federation are expected to send representatives. Inflation advocates, including Senator Thomas, of Oklahoma, are expected to attend.

A program for submission to the next Congress may be mapped out. The Farm Holiday Association, which called the farm strike, has been invited to send representatives.

Debt Committees Suggested.

Henry Morganthau, jr., governor of the Farm Credit Administration, requested State governors to appoint voluntary debt-conciliation committees, to be composed of farmers, lenders and business men.

County committees would be appointed to handle conferences between distressed farm debtors and their creditors, he said. He added that in many cases where farmers sought loans to refinance indebtedness, their debts exceeded the amounts that could be lent by the Federal Land Banks and the land bank commissioner. The conciliation committees would try to bring about a voluntary scaling down of debts.

Meanwhile, the Government already has taken steps to aid farmers. The administration program calls for payment of approximately $1,000,000,000 by consumers in a little more than two years, beginning last July, when processing tax No. 1 was levied on wheat, and ending November 4, 1935, when the hog and corn processing levies are scheduled to terminate.

Most of the proceeds, which may be increased by compensatory taxes on competing products, are to go to farmers.

The principal consideration will be that farmers forego planting as much as in the past. The first to see the color of the Government's benefit checks—cotton farmers—got them for plowing up from 25 to 50 per cent of their crop.

Millions in Process Taxes.

A substantial portion of the consumers' contribution will go to removing surpluses.

Today's status of processing tax levies:

A $348,000,000 processing tax on hogs and one with estimated receipts of from $60,000,000 to $70,000,000 on corn, which Secretary Wallace has ordered into effect on November 5 for two years.

The 30-cent a bushel tax on wheat, which went into effect July 9 with receipts forecast at $136,000,000, for one year. The rate soon may be boosted. Farm officials are committed definitely to continuation of this tax after July 9 next year, with contracts with wheat growers covering 1935 plantings.

Cotton—The 4.2 cent per pound tax levied since August 1 is scheduled to yield $150,000,000. The administration is committed to its continuance another year to finance its new acreage control program, so it will yield $300,000,000 in all unless rates are changed.

Tobacco—Taxes on various types recently ordered into effect are scheduled to yield at least $20,000,000 this year and another $20,000,000 next year, with the administration again committed in its grower contracts to a two-year program, which must depend on the tax for financing.

Rice Has No Tax.

Milk and milk products—The Farm Administration contemplates a levy of 1 cent per pound on butterfat to yield up to $30,000,000 each of the two years. It is already spending to buy butter for relief distribution.

Rice is one more farm commodity listed as "basic," but here the production control-price boosting program is being handled through marketing agreements, and no tax is contemplated.

While processing taxes can not be levied on other products, many are subject to processing taxes when they compete with basic commodities.

More than twoscore products already face these compensatory levies, but none have been ordered into effect, and prospective income remains undetermined. Secretary Wallace yesterday called hearings on the advisability of levying on products vying with corn and pork products for the consumer's purse.

Germans Hit League 'Forum' Of Jews, Reds

Wolff Agency Flays Geneva as "Mass Meeting" of Jews and Marxists.

Berlin, Oct. 20 (AP).—Two reasons were offered tonight for Germany's resignation from the League of Nations. They are: (1) That the league was a "forum for Jews and Marxists," and (2) it had refused to admit Germany from the beginning.

The semiofficial Wolff News Agency said the league lost the right to represent the civilized world "because it had become an anti-Fascist mass meeting and a platform for Jewish and Marxist oratory."

The allies' refusal to admit Germany from the first estranged the German people from the league, said the officially inspired Diplomatisch Politische Korrespondenz.

But not until the German consul general in Geneva has presented the withdrawal notice tomorrow will Germany know the contents of that momentous document.

Note to Cite No Reasons.

Germany took her time about notifying the secretariat of the resignation.

While Arthur Henderson, chairman of the arms conference, received a telegram last Saturday advising him of the Reich's abandonment of the discussions, the slower method of the mail pouch was chosen to advise the world that Berlin is through with the league.

The Associated Press was reliably informed that the league note will be very brief and give no reasons.

The German government believes the world, through Chancellor Hitler's speeches and interviews, has sufficiently been informed regarding reasons.

Charges Nations Met to Pose.

The Wolff statement said:

"Germany will no longer participate in such assemblies, which are a caricature on international cooperation.

"The exit from the league is the logical consequence of the failure of the disarmament conference which was only an instrument of the league.

"Besides the negative results of the disarmament conference the decisive factor was the impression of the last league meeting—where a number of states, with the sole desire to pose, made attempts to interfere with internal German politics."

MORE than a dozen Senators and Representatives have expressed support for restoration of Federal pay since Senator Pat Harrison broke the ice of Capitol Hill silence with his telegram to the A. F. L. convention last week.

Two additional Representatives yesterday wired E. Claude Babcock, president of the American Federation of Government Employes, that they will do their part for the Federal worker in the coming session of Congress. They were Charles L. Abernethy, of North Carolina, and John H. Hoeppel, of California. Both are Democrats. Abernethy wired: "I strongly advocate the Government adhering to the spirit of the recovery act by the restoration of the Federal pay cut."

League Views Hitler's Action As Reich Loss

Council Declared Able to Do Without Aid of Germany.

Geneva, Oct. 20 (AP).—League of Nations circles held the view tonight that Germany's resignation from the league would affect the cause of disarmament disastrously.

Geneva, however, believed that the Council of Nations got along without Germany up to 1926, and can survive now without the Reich.

The German consul, it was learned, will deliver Germany's notification of her action, first announced last Saturday, tomorrow.

Officials of the league pointed out, meanwhile, that Chancellor Hitler's government is bound indefinitely by the league covenant since it is a part of the Versailles postwar treaty.

League quarters believed the Hitler action was occasioned by the conviction that the four-power arms conversations had not advanced.

They said Premier Mussolini, of Italy, caused Hitler to delay the resignation, while other states were being sounded out, but when it was apparent that nothing would come of this move, Hitler decided to break with Geneva.

The belief that Europe political tension will be heightened underlay a grave view of possible developments resulting from the withdrawal, it was said.

Americans said they would remain here, determined to collaborate on disarmament as long as possible.

It was considered possible that with the resumption of the arms discussions next week a committee would be appointed to draft principles and avoid the appearance of failure.

U. S. Launches Welfare Plan

Survey Ordered to Form Basis for Permanent Program.

(Associated Press.)

Although the Federal Government has been in the field of direct human relief less than two years, and only on an emergency basis, administration officials are preparing the outlines of a permanent social welfare program.

First recommendations will go to the President in time for the session in January. They will deal not only with revisions of the present method of giving relief, but also with such questions as old-age pensions, mothers' pensions, unemployment insurance, housing conditions, aggravated by the depression, and dietetic needs of unemployed.

Although the number of persons demanding relief is showing fractional declines, Administration officials are taking it for granted that it will be several years before even all the employable on the relief rolls have been absorbed by industry and business and that even then the Federal Government will have on its hands problems of a permanent nature.

Under Presidential direction, officials are preparing a program not only for the pull back to normal conditions, but for dealing with permanent social problems after the depression.

The Nation-wide survey begun this week with a series of regional conferences under auspices of the Relief Administration is to collect information to be used in mapping both the temporary and permanent programs.

President Leaves To Receive Degree

Tells News Men He Will Say Something Sunday.

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 20 (AP).—President Roosevelt sailed from the Naval Academy docks tonight for a cruise across Chesapeake Bay to Chestertown, Md., where tomorrow he will receive a degree from Washington College.

Smiling, the President sat on the quarter deck of the Government yacht Sequoia as the ship pulled into the darkness. He remarked to newspapermen on the dock he would have something to say Sunday night in a talk to the country.

Mrs. Roosevelt accompanied him. With them were Harry Hopkins, Federal relief administrator, and Mrs. Hopkins.

Tabby Terrorizes Family; Police Posse in Search

Glace Bay, N. S., Oct. 20 (AP).—Nathan Green's cat went on a rampage and here's what happened.

Tabby attacked Mrs. Green and the maid, who repulsed her with a broomstick and sent for Green.

Green rushed home from his office, corraled Tabby after a battle, threw her into the rumble seat of his car and drove to the police station.

A policeman ordered to execute Tabby found a scratching mass of fur on his shoulders when he opened the rumble seat. He retreated and Tabby disappeared.

Police got a call from the Green home. Tabby had turned up again, and Mrs. Green and the maid had locked themselves in a room for safety. When police arrived at the Green home, Tabby had disappeared once more.

The seventh act was under way today. A half dozen policemen patrolled Glace Bay, armed with rifles, in search of Tabby, believed to be mad.

LindberghCash Is Only Clew To Aid Agents

Justice Officials Refuse to Confirm Finding of More "Jafsie" Money.

Portions of the Lindbergh baby ransom money still turning up in the United States and Canada will furnish the only clews the Department of Justice will inherit in taking over the famous case, it was indicated yesterday.

Justice officials declined to comment on reports that a new portion of the money "Jafsie" handed over a fence turned up yesterday. Such reticence was explained as customary, however, to conceal moves.

The Department of Justice, whose Bureau of Investigation will take up the task of searching for the kidnapers of the baby of Sourland Mountain, will have but this meager clew to work upon. Success of the bureau in handling various kidnapings which followed the Lindbergh crime led to the move.

Bureau Awaits Report.

Recent Federal activity in the case has been confined to one representative of the Intelligence unit of the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

The Bureau of Investigation now is awaiting a report from the Revenue Bureau describing work done up to the present. Meanwhile, New Jersey State police have never halted their investigation, and Col. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, State police superintendent, has made known his determination to apprehend the guilty persons as a climax to his career. More than 20 New York police and a regular detachment of New Jersey police are permanently assigned to the crime.

$25,000 Reward Stands.

The reward of $25,000 authorized by the New Jersey Legislature still is outstanding.

Joseph B. Keenan, Assistant Attorney General in charge of the Government's campaign against crime, asserted that interest in the case never has lagged in the department. The possibility of some of the major kidnapings in the country being perpetrated by criminals with knowledge of the Lindbergh affair has been often suggested.

Milk Hearings To Be Delayed

King Asks for Additional Information Before Inquiry Resumes.

Hearings of the Senate Milk Investigating Committee, scheduled to resume Monday, will be postponed several days, it was announced last night by Elwood H. Seal, special counsel to the committee.

After a conference with Senator William H. King, chairman of the committee, Mr. Seal said additional information requested by the senator would necessitate postponement.

Meanwhile, Representative Charles F. Crosby (Democrat), Pennsylvania, made plans for the organization of independent milk producers. This organization, he said, will be on a National scale.

Dairy farmers affiliated with the Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers Association are expected to take action today on the proposed District milk-marketing agreement.

Soviet Information Chief Here Acts as Go-Between in Notes

State Department Turns to Skvirsky When Dilemma Arises.

In a little red brick house on Massachusetts avenue lives the swarthy, broad-shouldered Russian Jew, Boris E. Skvirsky, whose presence here as chief of the Soviet information bureau facilitated the exchange of letters between President Roosevelt and Mikhail Kalinin, president of the Soviet central executive committee.

With that momentous exchange of letters, which he coded and decoded at the request of our State Department, Skvirsky rose suddenly from comparative obscurity to prominence as the chief representative of his country here.

For 10 years, without official recognition by the State Department, this quietly aggressive Russian revolutionist has been a focal point of information in Washington about the drama being played upon the Soviet stage. Traveling throughout the United States, addressing business men and civic bodies on events in Russia, Skvirsky's great dream has been recognition of his country by the American Government.

Completely Surprised.

To his complete surprise, when a first step which may lead to such recognition was contemplated, the State Department turned to him in a dilemma. Since Russia and the United States do not speak to each other diplomatically, the question of how President Roosevelt's invitation to President Kalinin should be transmitted immediately arose.

When the State Department received Mr. Roosevelt's communication it decided to consult Skvirsky, whose activities during a trying decade had not gone unnoticed—unofficially.

Would Mr. Skvirsky forward to his government President Roosevelt's invitation, coding it and cabling it for the State Department? Mr. Skvirsky, who saw his dream coming true, was more than pleased.

Decodes Reply.

When President Kalinin's reply came along it was decoded by Skvirsky and presented proudly to the State Department.

"Naturally I am highly gratified at this development," Skvirsky said last night, professing to take his increased prominence most quietly. "This opens the way for a better understanding between two countries of 300,000,000 people, and will promote international peace."

Teachers Hold Annual Session

6,000 Instructors Attend Maryland State Convention.

Baltimore, Md., Oct. 20 (Spl.). More than 6,000 Maryland school teachers met here today in three schools as the sixty-sixth annual meeting of the Maryland State Teachers Association got under way.

The general meeting of the secondary group was held at 2:30 p. m., in the auditorium of the Baltimore City College. At the same time the intermediate group met at the Polytechnic Institute and the kindergarten-primary group met in the Clifton Park Junior High School.

Eva E. Gersmyer, association president, presided at the city college meeting. Dr. Walter Barnes, professor of English, New York University, addressed the meeting.

Dr. Barnes told his audience that exponents of English literature must take into account the influence of the radio, motion pictures and the development of magazines and newspapers when instructing pupils.

While the more important classics should be kept in the curriculum, more attention should be devoted to contemporary literature, he contended.

Dr. Payson Smith, commissioner of education, Massachusetts, addressed the intermediate group. Dr. Smith spoke on "A Three-fold Challenge to American Education," at the kindergarten-primary meeting, Dr. Arthur L. Gates, of the Teachers' College, Columbia University, spoke on "Some Prerequisites of Progressive Education."

After the three general meetings the teachers scattered to class rooms for sectional meetings.

Athens, Oct. 20 (AP).—Samuel Insull today said he was "confident" regarding the United States Government's second attempt to extradite him in connection with the collapse of his utilities interests.

"My London and Chicago lawyers have not been lazy all this time," said the former Chicagoan about the hearing tomorrow.

Indications were that the small courtroom will be taxed to capacity.

New York, Oct. 20 (U.P.).—Four men, convicted of killing Michael Malloy, were sentenced to die in the electric chair in Bronx County Court today.

When Judge J. M. Barrett asked if any of the four had anything to say, Daniel Kreisberg was the only one to reply.

"It's a nice day," he said, "for some people."

McKee Assails Mills as Foe Of Roosevelt

Supports La Guardia Only to Seek Presidency Himself, Charge.

New York, Oct. 20 (AP).—As his backers stressed his willingness to work "in harmony" with the President, Joseph V. McKee, Independent mayoralty candidate, today accused Ogden L. Mills of supporting Fiorello H. La Guardia "to strike at President Roosevelt."

Injecting the President's name into the city's bitter three-cornered mayoralty struggle, McKee charged Mills with seeking "to aid his own chances for the Presidency in 1936" by backing a man he knows "is a Communist at heart."

While McKee attacked Mills, Secretary of the Treasury under President Hoover, his campaign manager, George V. McLaughlin, was asked if he agreed with the statement by a candidate on the McKee ticket that "a vote for McKee is a vote for the President."

"McKee will have little difficulty," he said, "in working in perfect harmony and close cooperation with President Roosevelt and Gov. Herbert H. Lehman, especially in the public works program."

"McKee assailed Mills after conservative Republicans espoused the fusion candidacy of La Guardia, who had been a Progressive in Congress.

Girl to Name Kelly Harborer

Witness, Used as Blind by Kidnapers, Before Grand Jury.

Chicago, Oct. 20 (AP).—Carefully guarded by Federal agents, 13-year-old Geraldine Arnold went before the grand jury today to tell who harbored George (Machine Gun) Kelly in Chicago as the Urschel kidnaper fled.

Frankly fearful of the child's safety, Federal officials hoped her testimony would aid in the prosecution of Joseph Bergl, alleged "armorer" for gangsters; Abe Caplan, beer tavern owner, and his brother, Charles Caplan, reputed liquor dealer.

The Government investigators said they learned Kelly and his wife spent a week in Chicago, living in an apartment rented by underworld friends and visiting cafes nightly, while they were being hunted.

Geraldine went about the country with the Kellys for days, serving as a "blind" for the couple. She was released by them to return home and directed authorities to their hideaway in Memphis, Tenn.

6 in Family Hold Reunion—In Jail

Father, Mother, Children Held on Liquor Charges.

Oklahoma City, Oct. 20 (AP).—The Staggs family was reunited today—in jail.

Several weeks ago Clark Staggs was arrested on a liquor charge. Then came B. B. Staggs on the same charge. Early in October Mrs. Clark Staggs was convicted of making whisky and joined her husband behind the bars.

The family round-up was completed with the arrest of George, Claudie May and Jean Staggs on possession charges.

She Trys Pajamas, Falls Into $12,500

Store Sued After Woman Backed Through Window.

St. Louis, Oct. 20 (AP).—Mrs. Charles Heiss today won $12,500 damages because she backed through a window while trying on a pair of pajamas.

The window was on the second floor of a department store, which lost the suit.

Mrs. Heiss testified she fell from the window and suffered severe injuries while attempting to view herself in a mirror in a dressing room. An awning broke the fall.

Doom Hinted For Nazi Foes By Prosecutor

59 Communists Arraigned in Slaying of Nazi Storm Trooper.

Berlin, Oct. 20 (AP).—What is in store for Germany's political prisoners was hinted during the hearing today for 59 Communists accused of slaying a Nazi storm trooper, when the prosecutor declared:

"Woe to those who leave this courtroom remaining Bolshevists at heart!"

Meanwhile the audience at the Reichstag arson trial was electrified by seeing stolid Marinus van der Lubbe, one of the five accused, respond to a roaring command of the Nazi chieftain, Count Wolf von Helldorff.

The young police chief succeeded where others failed, namely, in getting a response from the young Dutch brick mason.

For 10 minutes the court tried to get Van der Lubbe to say whether he had seen the count before.

"Are you afraid to look him in the face?" Presiding Judge Wilhelm Buenger demanded of the young man, who stood before him stooped over.

Alfons Sack, defense attorney, asked Von Helldorff to step closer to the defendant, so "the world can't say you were so far off he couldn't recognize you."

Then the count stepped up to Van der Lubbe and snapped out: "Sum donnerwetter! Put up your head and say something!"

Suddenly the Dutchman answered tersely but clearly, "No."

But many questions hurled at him by two other defendants, Ernst Torgler and Georgi Dimitroff, visibly embarrassed Van der Lubbe, who confessed setting the fire in the German Parliament building last February.

Britain Would End Arms Row

Sir John Simon Defended on German Charge in White Book.

London, Oct. 20 (AP).—The British government issued a white paper tonight which, it was learned authoritatively, was aimed at settling the dispute on disarmament negotiations between Sir John Simon, the foreign secretary, and Konstantin von Neurath, the German foreign minister.

The document merely put into permanent and official form previously published reports regarding the disarmament bureau meeting in Geneva on October 14, and an exchange of telegrams between Sir John and Baron von Neurath, concerning Germany's withdrawal from the arms parley.

The issue between British and German foreign ministers was whether Sir John had accurately interpreted Anglo-German conversations in London October 6 to American delegates and others.

Sir John had denied he misrepresented the German arms stand.

Weight Loss Irks 798 Pound Woman

Says Neighbors Caused Her to Fall Off.

Jacksonville, Fla., Oct. 20 (AP). "Aunt Mamie" Williams, Negro, who once tipped the scales at 798 pounds, complained to the sheriff's office that troublesome neighbors have caused her to lose 200 pounds.

They have made her feel "poorly," she said, and she wants peace and quiet restored that the lost poundage may be regained. She is 48 and works the garden in which much of her food is raised.

Rich Manufacturer Robbed and Slain

Four Bandits Escape With $1,050 Pay Roll.

Cambridge, Mass., Oct. 20 (AP).—Adolph Sommer, 86, wealthy scientist and manufacturer, was shot and killed outside his manufacturing plant here today by bandits who robbed him of a $1,050 pay roll and escaped in a car. He once was a professor at the University of California.

The slaying was witnessed by Harold Bloomberg, Sommer's plant superintendent, who drove the payroll car. Bloomberg, covered by pistols of three bandits while the leader shot his employer, was unable to offer resistance.

Two bullets struck the aged man in the chest and he fell dead.

District Housing Shortage Is Forecast This Winter

Rent Statistics Show Favorable Trend of Business.

This is the third of a series on revival of home construction, with particular reference to Washington.

By W. C. Miller
(President, Federated Real Estate Boards of the United States).

Shortly after the war the Nation began to build homes again. The movement reached its peak in 1926. There followed a gradual decline in home building. For the past two years housing construction has receded to an abnormally low point.

As a consequence of this building cycle Washington, like almost every other city in the United States, experienced a building surplus. The surplus was at its maximum in 1927. With the slowing up of local building, the growth in the population of the city and the progress of obsolescence this surplus was largely absorbed by 1931.

A natural upward trend in the city's real estate business resulting from the elimination of its surplus building was delayed by the effect of the national depression on Washington business in general.

Pay Rolls Sustained.

The delayed effect of the depression on local business was due to the fact that Federal and District Government pay rolls were sustained at prosperity levels for the first three years of the depression.

The progressive reaction of the slump on the salaries and earnings of the 175,000 workers in the city who are not Government employes precipitated a doubling up on living quarters. It should be emphasized that at the time this began Washington was not overbuilt as far as small houses were concerned.

Housing vacancies were due to the fact that home owners and tenants were seeking cheaper living accommodations. Young married couples returned to stay with parents. Parents often moved in on young couples. This situation was aggravated by three other factors: The change in administration, the Federal pay cut and the closing of 14 District banking institutions.

Business Disturbed.

Administration changes in Washington disturbed the real estate business. Government clerks, who constitute a large part of the demand for Washington homes, became alarmed. The consequence is a normal tendency for buyers to hold off on buying and for Government workers who are in doubt about their ultimate status to put their homes on renting lists as a precautionary economy. The Federal pay cut accelerated this tendency.

It is estimated by Rufus Lusk, well-known local statistician and former secretary of the Operative Builders Association, that there are at present in the city some 11,000 people who have doubled up on their living quarters since 1931.

"A clearing up of these adverse factors should in itself produce a revived demand for homes that would probably result in a satisfactory utilization of all the city's housing facilites now available. The possibilities that this will happen are reasonably assuring.

Salary Gain Expected.

An upward revision of Government salaries is looked for at an early date. Employment uncertainties are being diminished as business indices indicate a marked improvement in general business over the country.

The closed bank problem of the District is rapidly approaching a stage of effective remedy. While two banks are still in the hands of receivers, the Hamilton National Bank, representing a merger of seven banks, has already made available to the depositors of these closed banks approximately 50 per cent of their deposits, representing between $10,000,000 and $11,000,000. The Franklin National Bank plans to release about 60 per cent of its deposits, or $1,800,000, in the near future. The Washington Mechanics-Mount Vernon Savings Bank merger is expected to liquify from 40 per cent to 50 per cent of the two banks' total deposits of approximately $4,500,000 at an early date.

In the meantime other demand forces are developing. All during the depression the city has grown steadily. At the same time home building for the past two years has been depressed to such a low level of operation that no effective provision for the city's depression growth has been made.

Increased Marriages.

Moreover the first sustained stimulation of trade will undoubtedly result in a sudden increase in marriages in the District. In St. Louis, a city about twice the size of Washington, the number of marriages that have been delayed by the depression is estimated by D. S. Wenzlick, real estate economist, in the April issue of Real Estate Analyst, Inc., to be 20,000. Referring to the potential demand inherent in delayed marriages, he says:

"They create a concealed, little understood, but most important demand for housing when a depression subsides."

With the abatement of the depression this population growth, under building and increased marriage will result in a considerable extra demand for homes. Following is a record of the city's growth in the last thirteen years:

Population of Washington as of June 30.

1920	437,571	1927	473,642
1921	444,785	1928	478,452
1922	449,594	1929	483,262
1923	454,403	1930	488,000
1924	459,212	1931	491,000
1925	464,022	1932	493,000
1926	468,832	1933	495,000

Figures on home construction during the depression reveal the following facts:

In 1927 the city built from 4,000 to 4,500 housing units. For the first eight months of the current year the city has built only 332 houses and 11 small apartments, the maximum size of which does not exceed four housing units. Total value of construction work declined from $63,499,330 in 1926 to $11,301,960 in 1932. The city built in 1932 50 per cent less housing units than it did in 1931, while it is estimated that for the current year housing construction will be 50 per cent less than that of 1932.

Demand Developing.

Additional demand for homes already has developed as a consequence of the organization of national recovery by the Federal Government. The extent of this demand, though incapable of exact measurement, is from present indications likely to be large and a very determining factor in the emergence of a housing shortage this winter.

The Government has a larger personnel by some 700 employes than it had on January 1 of this year. The signs are that a further expansion of Government employment will occur. To date only 29 industries have been coded. It is estimated that from 150 to 250 codes will be eventually completed. The NRA and the public works act are still in their operative infancy and will very probably utilize more help as their administration proceeds and new problems arise.

As the recovery machinery of the Government gains momentum the outlook is for business organizations to establish Washington offices in increasing numbers in order to protect more effectively their interests under the operation of codes, the regulation of agriculture and the securing of Government funds in aid of business.

Offices Renting.

An examination of Washington office vacancies in five of the largest office buildings discloses an already noticeable increase in renting due to this influence.

In July the Tower Building reported the renting of 28 suites. The great bulk of these went to people having business with the new deal. The Investment Building reports that it has rented 101 rooms since the first of the year of which more than half were let since July 1.

Nineteen rooms were rented to trade associations and other business associations brought to Washington by the activities of the NRA. Eighteen rooms were taken by new attorneys representing business interests affected by codes that have been completed. Four rooms were leased to manufacturing representatives engaged in observing the trends of the recovery program.

The Washington Building, which has had a considerable amount of vacancy for a number of years, is now reported by its manager as fully rented. The new Shoreham Building is likewise filled. The Press Building reports that it has increased its rented space by 25 per cent in the last six months and that the greater part of this new tenancy is due to the current program of the Federal Government.

In this building several newspapers have established Washington correspondents for the first time. New tenants include representatives of the Petroleum Institute, the Wholesale and Retail Grocers of the United States and a considerable enlargement of the Democratic National Committee.

Government Takes Space.

Chambers of commerce over the country are reported by the National Chamber of Commerce to be detailing representatives to Washington to study the recovery machinery at close range. The Portland (Oreg.) Chamber has already sent its secretary. At the same time the Government is negotiating for 40,000 feet of space in Washington office buildings to house an expected influx of new workers. This is an area half the size of the largest office building in the city.

How effectively this growth of Government and business has already reacted on housing vacancies in the city is shown from an examination of renting records in the last three months. The largest hotel apartment in the city reports a rental of 80 apartments in the last six weeks, of which more than 50 per cent were leased by new Government employes or representatives of private business.

While no complete data can be obtained on many of the trends outlined nor can the extent of these forces be estimated for the future, I believe the samples cited are of sufficient value to reasonably justify a conclusion that the growth of the city's population during the depression, the decline of home building in the last two years, the prospects of a revival in general business, the factor of marriage latency and the growth of Government and private business in Washington proceeding from the recovery work of the administration, will combine to produce a housing shortage in the District this winter.

University Destroyed By $1,000,000 Fire

St. Joseph, New Brunswick, Oct. 20 (AP).—Fire of undetermined origin almost wiped out St. Joseph's University tonight, causing damage hurriedly estimated at $1,000,000. The 300 students were in the chapel when the fire started.

The main building and the "old university" unit were leveled. Only the new chapel, skating rink and gymnasium survived.

New Republican Treasurer Supported Smith in 1928 Election.

Chicago, Oct. 20 (AP).—Millionaire Sportsman George F. Getz today became treasurer of the Republican National Committee, called for support of President Roosevelt's recovery program and prepared to welcome to Chicago his old friend and one-time political ally, Alfred E. Smith.

Long a zealous worker in the Republican party, Getz strayed outside its fold in 1928 to campaign for Smith as vigorously as he ever had worked for a G. O. P. candidate. However, he was back again with the Republicans in 1932.

"My support of Al Smith in '28 was largely a personal matter," Getz said. "I learned to admire and respect the man during two years when he was in my employ after being defeated for reelection as Governor of New York in 1920."

Getz was prompt in declaring the Republicans would put up a hearty fight for Congressional seats next year. He said a meeting would be called soon in the East to map the campaign.

Taking over the Republican treasury at a time when it reportedly has a large deficit from last year's Presidential campaign, Getz announced his first consideration would be to "do what I can to aid the general recovery."

For the present, he said, that duty would center about giving wholehearted support to President Roosevelt.

"Every good American should give the President full support, whether he is a Republican or a Democrat," Getz said.

Smith arrives tomorrow to be a guest at the world's fair. To the new Republican treasurer has gone the task of making all arrangements for his stay.

Smith was president of the United States Distributing Co., controlled by Getz, during 1920-'22.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. W. A. Evans.

Night Jobs.

Mrs. E. M. writes: Will continual night work impair the health? My husband gets on an average of six to seven hours sleep during the day, and at times he feels exhausted and too tired to go on.

Reply.

Two questions are raised by your letter. One is as to comparative healthfulness of night and day work. The other is as to the sufficiency of six to seven hours' sleep.

During the war it was deemed advisable to keep certain industries going day and night. One shift had to work nights. The effect of night jobs on workers was carefully studied. It was not possible to prove that night work of itself was harmful. It is difficult for a night worker to get eight hours of equal uninterrupted sleep. Custom makes the daytime noisier. It makes it difficult to protect the sleeper against callers, doorbells, peddlers and street hawkers. In the summer the sleeper finds the day heat oppressive and the light is not easily kept out.

Except for indirect matters such as these, night work should be no more trying than day work. In ordinary times thousands have jobs that call for night work. There is no statistical evidence that they are less healthy or have a shorter life expectancy. Life insurance companies have not found newspaper men, railroad men, postal clerks, or others who do night shifts to be poorer risks than fellow workers on the same type of jobs, but doing day work.

Nevertheless, the belief that night work is harmful was strong enough to cause the British commission on the health of munition workers to recommend that work be alternated—say one month on a day shift and one on a night. To my mind this seemed an unwise recommendation. Often a man becomes accustomed to a night shift and his home is regulated on that basis. It is better for him to stick to his grooves.

The answer to the second question is that few men can remain in good health on a six to seven hour sleeping schedule. Most men require eight hours or more. Very few require less than eight. That this man is not getting enough sleep is proved by the fact that at times he feels "exhausted and too tired to go on." In the course of time a man who frequently feels exhausted and too tired to go on will pay the price of chronic fatigue.

One legitimate objection to night work is the practical difficulty night workers have in getting sufficient sleep.

Nail Biting.

E. G. writes: Please publish a dissertation on nail biting in children, causes and possible cure. It is an ugly and repulsive habit and is disfiguring. I am much distressed over a particular case, a child of 3½ years.

Reply.

Nail biting can be cured. In fact, cure is the rule. Keeping the nails painted with a bitter varnish is generally very helpful. We supply a recipe for such a varnish to those who send a stamped, self-addressed envelope for it.

However, this method is not effective unless it is accompanied by training, and training can be effective without it. Nail biting is a manifestation of nervousness. It is one of the things that nervous people do as manifestations of their being ill at ease.

The Nebraska Inflationists.

Gov. Bryan of Nebraska alleges that the farmer's throat is "being cut from both ears" by abandonment of antitrust laws and declining farm prices. "The only remedy so far in sight," he says, "as everything else tried has failed, is to increase the farmers' income by increasing the amount of basic money in circulation." He joins Senator Norris in urging the issuance of new money to retire the Fourth Liberty bonds which are to be exchanged for new interest-bearing securities, and he also urges payment of the soldiers' bonus in "new currency as a means of putting money into circulation in every precinct and every grocery store."

The so-called Nebraska revolt against the Administration's recovery program is attributed to the failure of farm income to expand as rapidly as expected. Recent declines in the prices of farm products accompanied by continuing increases in the prices of the goods that farmers buy have deepened the feeling of discouragement and added to the anxiety of local merchants who fear that they may be unable to dispose of stocks of goods acquired at higher prices. The result is that demands for currency inflation in the form of greenback issues again are being pushed.

The fallacious reasoning of "soft money" advocates, such as Gov. Bryan and Senator Norris, who believe that the farm population of the country can be provided with a better market for its products by putting paper money into circulation, is revealed by the character of their own complaints. They both emphasize the disparity between the prices of farm products and of the goods that the farmer buys as the chief cause of the growing discontent with the Administration's program. Yet they are urging resort to a form of general inflation that would do nothing at all to narrow the gap between farm prices and other prices.

Suppose, for instance, that the Government were to print and distribute several billions of dollars of greenbacks to holders of bonus certificates and owners of Liberty bonds. The money issued would be spent by the recipients for many sorts of commodities. The proceeds would not go solely to farmers through increased buying of their products. After passing from hand to hand a few times most of this new currency eventually would be deposited in banks. Therewith the temporary buying stimulus, spread over a wide field, would be exhausted, unless of course the shock to public confidence due to the decision to issue fiat money were to start a general flight from currency into goods. In such case, however, the resultant inflationary disturbances would affect the prices of commodities which the farmer buys as well as those which he sells.

Gov. Bryan's argument that more money is needed to furnish buying demands or bids for farm products has been disproved time and time again by citation of the facts. The volume of money in circulation on October 18, for example, amounted to $5,650,000,000, whereas in 1928 and 1929, money in circulation remained well below $5,000,000,000 except for an end-of-the-year rise in each of these years.

Furthermore, a record figure for outstanding circulation was reported last March in consequence of the panic, which brought the total to $7,581,000,000. Clearly, there is something wrong with the assumption that the amount of money in circulation is an index to the prosperity of the farmer, who is certainly receiving much better prices for his products today than he obtained last March.

Purchasing power—whether in the form of money or deposits subject to check—must be used to a relatively greater extent to buy farm products instead of other goods, in order to improve the economic status of the farmer as compared with other classes of producers. Indiscriminate inflation of the currency by resort to paper money issues would not reduce the disparity between prices of farm products and other commodities, and therefore would not increase the percentage of the National income going to farmers. On the contrary, monetary inflation is likely to raise the prices of many kinds of manufactured goods at a more rapid rate than the prices of farm products, because production costs are more sensitive in the former case to inflationary stimuli, and marketing proceeds in more regular fashion.

As Secretary Wallace frequently says, price advances obtained by the paper-money route do not remove surplus farm supplies from the market, nor can they be counted upon to improve the economic position of farm producers. The Nebraska rebels who complain because the prices of goods bought by farmers are rising would have even greater cause for objecting to the mounting prices of a period of monetary inflation, and they would find themselves no nearer a solution of their basic problem of adjusting farm output to amounts that can be sold at a profit.

Foreign Competition.

A large number of complaints against foreign competition have been lodged with the National Recovery Administration. An order instructing the Tariff Commission to investigate the importation of some commodities is reported to be en route to the White House for the approval of the President. Some groups are urging the administration to invoke its powers under the national recovery act to restrict imports that tend to render ineffective any code of fair competition.

The law provides that any trade or labor organization operating under a code may appeal to the President for relief from foreign competition whenever "any article or articles are being imported into the United States in substantial quantities or increasing ratio to domestic production of any competitive article or articles and on such terms or under such conditions as to render ineffective or seriously to endanger the maintenance of any code or agreement under this title." Investigations by the Tariff Commission under this act must be given precedence over its other work. If the commission finds that any code is jeopardized by importations, the President may levy special duties, prescribe quotas for the various countries importing the commodities in question and require importers to obtain licenses.

Demands for the exercise of this power were inevitable from the beginning of the NRA program, which calls for reduced hours of work and higher wages and prices within the United States. In many cases the resulting increased costs of production here give some foreign competitors an advantage in the American market.

In some quarters the decline of the dollar was expected to protect domestic producers against excessive imports and to stimulate American exports. But a large increase in imports during recent months, giving the United States an adverse balance of trade, put this theory into the discard. Most of the currencies that are divorced from gold have depreciated more than the dollar, thus precluding any temporary advantages that might have been expected from a depreciated dollar if other currencies had remained on a gold basis.

If prices and costs of production continue to increase as a result of the NRA codes, there will be many demands for higher duties. In view of the fact that the United States sponsored the tariff truce adopted at the world economic conference and is now trying to negotiate reciprocal trade agreements with a number of countries, every such demand probably will be scrutinized closely. But the present trend appears to be toward disparity in production costs, and tariff adjustments may become necessary.

A State's Wheat Embargo.

The order issued by Gov. William Langer of North Dakota prohibiting the shipment of wheat out of that State is based upon a State law authorizing such action in the discretion of the Governor, whenever the price of wheat should fall below cost of production. It is now the subject of controversy between the State and railroads serving North Dakota.

The legal counsel of all the railroads have advised their clients that they must accept and transport all shipments offered. The Federal Constitution and Federal law and judicial decisions are cited in support of this position. The Constitution prohibits any State from laying any imposts or duties upon imports or exports without the consent of Congress; and many decisions by Federal courts have debarred States from imposing any burden upon interstate commerce. One of the notable cases is that of Lemke, Attorney General of North Dakota, et al., vs. Farmers' Grain Co. of Emden, N. Dak., reported in 258 U. S., 50. The State of North Dakota in 1919 enacted a grain grading and inspection law which empowered an inspector to grade grain and fix the price to be paid by the buyer before the grain could leave the State. The United States Supreme Court invalidated this law on the ground that it imposed a burden upon interstate commerce.

Notwithstanding the apparent conflict with the Constitution, Gov. Langer is proceeding to enforce his order. State troops will be ordered to strategic points to prevent by force the shipment of wheat out of the State. The railroads will not meet force with force, of course, but have given notice that they will accept all tenders of wheat for shipment out of the State, subject to delay.

Gov. Langer is quoted as stating that he expected some attempt to be made to obtain a restraining order from a Federal court, but that unless the State law should be held unconstitutional he would carry his proclamation into effect.

The points raised by Gov. Langer's order are somewhat novel, but apparently the central question has been determined. The denial of the right of a State to impose a duty upon exports or to impede interstate commerce seemingly precludes it from imposing an embargo.

Employment and Production.

Employment gains in September brought the increase since March up to 34 per cent. Secretary Perkins estimates that more than 2,700,000 men have gone back to work during the last six months in the 17 industrial groups surveyed by her department. She calculates the gain in the aggregate weekly pay rolls during that time at $64,000,000. This means an advance of about 60 per cent in pay rolls since March.

Even though these gains fall short of some official expectations made public several months ago, they indicate a substantial reduction of unemployment.

Of course, aggregate pay rolls of industry have increased faster than employment. Many industrial workers who were on part-time pay last spring are now more fully employed. The difference between the 34 per cent gain in employment and the 60 per cent gain in pay rolls may be accounted for, in part, by this fact. On the other hand, hours of work have been shortened in some industries under the codes of fair competition. Because of the great variety of conditions affecting different industries it is impossible to determine just how the benefits of higher pay rolls are distributed.

While the average working man is earning more than he received a few months ago, it is apparent that his purchasing power has not increased by a large margin. Fairchild's retail price index for September shows a gain of 23.5 per cent since the low point last spring. Other indices record similar gains. Wholesale prices have advanced about 18 per cent during the same period.

Even though employment and pay rolls have increased in recent weeks, industrial production has declined. Authoritative figures are not yet available for September, but in August the Federal Reserve Board's index of industrial production stood at 90, compared with 96 in July. Unofficial studies indicate that this trend continued last month. In other words, the increase in buying power, plus the will to spend, has not been sufficient to sustain the volume of activity that was attained under special stimulating influences during the early summer.

Europe's Sore Spot.

Austria, at the hub of Europe, becomes every day the subject of greater concern to many of her neighbors. Premier Dollfuss was forced to assume dictatorial powers in his energetic campaign against Nazi influence at home and from the German side of the border, which was undermining his government. Notwithstanding the official banning of the National Socialist party, an insidious, under-cover growth of Nazi strength has been discovered.

A Nazi military organization that has widespread ramifications throughout the country is now reported to have enlisted support in the army. The government investigation of alleged Nazi plots in the Linz garrison uncovered indications that the Nazi storm troops, secretly organized, now count upon the active cooperation of army officers and retired soldiers. The higher officers are not involved, but captains and lieutenants are believed to be active in drilling Nazis secretly.

Investigators report that the Kuernberger forest, near Linz, has been the scene of maneuvers, Nazi storm troopers arriving in small groups at dawn for drills that are held in the depth of the forest. It is contended that this situation is only possible because many of the political police also are in sympathy with the movement. Opinion is said to be divided as to whether the severe measures of the government have repressed Nazi activity or whether the harshness of these measures has turned many citizens against the premier.

The United States is no longer increasing in population, so it is possible that the overproduction of economic theories can be reduced to 125,000,000 if the ban on foreign dumping can be maintained.

George Peek asserts that complete farm recovery can not be achieved by the waving of a magic wand, but Nebraska wants to wave it a little, anyhow.

Price fixing of big corporation executives seems to be in the offing.

Old-Time Lotteries.

From the New York Herald Tribune.

Some one will win 5,000,000 francs ($302,000) Armistice Day, when first drawings are made in the new French national lottery for the benefit of war pensions and farm relief. Besides this grand prize there are 15 prizes of 1,000,000 and 20 of 500,000 francs to be awarded. Popular response has been so enthusiastic (6,000,000 tickets were sold by the first of October) that many wonder if this state lottery may not be continued as a means of raising revenue. Will lotteries, once a common makeshift of state finance, be resorted to again by other governments?

Our own Government has only one lottery to its credit, or discredit. It would be gross exaggeration to call it a state lottery, but Congress once (1792) authorized a small and, so to speak, household one for the benefit of the new City of Washington. Fifty thousand tickets were offered at $7, and the grand prize was a hotel. But lotteries with respectable sanction were exceedingly common with us in our Colonial and early Federal days. King's College, now Columbia, was founded on the receipts of a lottery. Holworthy Hall (or much of it) was a gift of the lottery to Harvard. Yale, Brown, Dartmouth, Union and other Eastern colleges in their early days invited people to take a chance for the benefit of higher education. The City Hall was twice repaired on lottery profits; Faneuil Hall was rebuilt on them.

The eighteenth century mania for lotteries produced churches, academies, jails, town halls, lighthouses, pest and pauper houses and other public buildings, very much as fund-raising campaigns for charitable and educational purposes have done since the war. Benjamin Franklin, John Hancock and George Washington indorsed or patronized lotteries of this kind. The Rev. Samuel Seabury, father of Bishop Seabury and progenitor of the distinguished New York judge, records in his diary "thanks and praise to Almighty God, the giver of all good gifts," for receiving a prize of 500 pounds sterling in a New York public lottery.

It is about a hundred years ago that something like a century of lottery mania subsided. New York and Massachusetts prohibited lotteries in 1833, and other States presently followed their example. France had ruled them out the previous year, England in 1826. Are their disrepute and abuses so far forgotten that we may see them again in respectable standing, ends justifying means, as in the present French state lottery?

The Early Birds.

The Once Over.

By H. I. Phillips.

THE MELANCHOLY DAZE.

(With the usual apologies.)

The melancholy days are come, the saddest of the year,
Of wailing winds, and screeching mikes and campaign speeches drear.
The joys of summer now are gone and cities hear the cry
Of candidates for office as they use the pronoun "I."
The lighter things of life have flown and we must listen to The candidate for office tell the world what he will do.

II.

Where are the girls, the bathing girls, that lately swam and stood
In brighter light and softer airs, a beauteous sisterhood?
Alas! they all are back to work and we're supposed to fall
For spouting politicians who have no such shapes at all!
Upon the radio the slur and harsh invective fly
As men who would be mayors tell the things they'll do or die.

III.

The windflower and the violet, they now are left behind—
The violets we see today are not the shrinking kind;
The air is full of speeches bad and plot and counterplot,
And every day some racketeer is put upon the spot;
From every side there comes the shout of Grafter!" "Crook!"
and "Liar!"
And, woe is me! Again I have to build a furnace fire!

IV.

The carefree, happy days are gone;
again it's time I should Be putting up the storm doors and intently sawing wood.
Heaped all about my spacious lawn
the autumn leaves lie dead,
And as I rake 'em up I wish they'd fall elsewhere instead.
I rake and rake and rake and rake until I'm stiff with pain—
And in the morning when I rise the leaves are there again.

V.

I pile 'em up in little piles and run to get a match—
A wind comes up and—poof!—again
I have to start from scratch!
I ultimately ply the torch, then go indoors to seek A moment's rest...and then I hear the fire engines shriek!
The flames have spread across the lawn and through a smoky haze
I see my neighbor's home and fence and hennery ablaze.

VI.

Humiliation fills my soul; I am beset by fears
That I'll be dragged before a judge and given seven years.
I help the firemen with the hose and save my neighbor's place, Apologizing to him with a sad and abject face . . .
And then I hear the engines start their shriekings all anew—
I turn and swoon when I behold my house is burning too!

VII.

Ah! how I miss those summer days when all was deep content
And all the world around me seemed on pleasure only bent!
Now must I mend the furnace grate and set the dampers right
And worry, worry worry lest the fire die at night.
I now must shake the furnace down and cart the ashes out
Despite my sinus, rheumatiz, hay fever and my gout.

VIII.

The melancholy days have come,
the saddest of the year—
For me I'll tell the world they can't too quickly disappear.
The winter evenings now impend in lowland and on ridge,
Again I hear those awful words,
"You'll make a fourth at bridge."
The melancholy days have come and so I think that I
Will end this verse and sign it,
"Just a melancholy guy!"

BOOKS ON RUSSIA

It is impossible to find out the truth about present-day Russia, even by going there; because many men of more than average power of observation have spent some time in personal investigation, and have brought home contradictory and irreconcilable testimony. But even if I depended only on favorable opinions, I should still believe that Russia is the very last country in Europe where I should wish to live.

The books of Maurice Hindus, especially "Humanity Uprooted," and those of Isaac Don Levine, especially "Red Smoke," I particularly recommend. They contain many valuable facts and are free from the expression of partisan opinion. "These Russians," by William C. White, is an excellent report of many individual contacts with Russians of various occupations and of varying intelligence. For the American tourist going to Russia who knows nothing of her political and literary history, and confines himself to Leningrad and Moscow, I recommend "This is Russia," by George Raiguel and W. K. Huff. Among still more recent books, one should read "The White Armies of Russia," by George Stewart, and "The Tragedy of Russia," by Will Durant. And one who went to pray and remained to scoff is Ellery Walter, who gives vivid impressions in his book, "Russia's Decisive Year."

Another Letter From a Bald-Headed Dad to His Red-Headed Daughter

By Robert Quillen.

My Dear Louise: My father used to say: "It is foolish to worry about a thing you can't help, and stupid to worry about a thing you can help. If you can help it, there's no cause for worry; if you can't help it, worry does no good."

You show no signs of becoming a worrier; but doubtless you will carry the usual burden of fear, and that is a kindred calamity.

Fear, I suspect, causes more unhappiness than anything else in the world. Almost everybody lives in fear of something—of ill health or unpopularity or poverty or death, or even life itself. And fear keeps them on the ragged edge of misery.

I hope you won't get the fear habit. There's nothing I can do about it if you do, but I can show you how to reason yourself out of it before the habit takes root.

It's a simple plan, based on the fact that fear, like worry, is shamefully stupid if it can't do any good.

Some fear, of course, is necessary and profitable. A reasonable fear causes you to run out of doors during an earthquake or fire and to watch your step in a region infested by snakes. That kind of fear is just sane discretion.

But the other kind is like a tantrum. If you yearned for a new frock and knew you could get it by throwing yourself on the floor and screaming blue murder, the profit might justify the antics. All of us would forget our dignity and act silly if it would make us rich.

But would you lie on the floor and scream if you knew such spoiled-brat tactics would bring no results? You would not. Natural dignity and common sense would prevent it.

Well, why surrender to fear if that doesn't change matters?

Suppose you are in a thunderstorm. If you could make yourself safe by shuddering and screaming, it would be sensible to shudder and scream.

But since each bolt will inevitably strike in the same place, whether you smile or squeal, isn't it silly to give way to fear? It would be as sensible, and as useful, to stand on your head.

It usually pays, before doing anything, to ask yourself what's the use. And if it isn't any use whatsoever, why make yourself seem simple by doing it.

Love, DAD.

Press Comment

Cotton Code Succeeds.

Philadelphia Public Ledger.

In these days when there is much criticism, some apparently not unjustified, of the workings of the NRA, it is instructive to consider the report made yesterday by George A. Sloan, president of the Cotton Textile Institute, of the effect this movement has exerted on this industry. This was the first industry to submit a code and have it approved.

Wages have been materially increased and stabilized. Mr. Sloan asserts that the prediction that the minimum wage scale would become the maximum has been thoroughly disproved. The shortening of hours has not affected wages injuriously. Jobs have been provided for 140,000 additional workers, bringing employment back to higher than predepression levels. The picture painted by Mr. Sloan is an encouraging one. His hope that the administration's scheme will work as well in other industries will be widely shared.

Vermont Eligibles.

New York Times.

For the size of its population, Vermont vies with any State in the Union in the number of citizens qualified for high office. There have been periods when Vermont senators at Washington challenged comparison with those of any other State in ability and usefulness. The stature of George F. Edmunds and Justin Morrill in their time was impressive. For the seat of the late Senator Porter H. Dale there is no dearth of eligibles.

Wages and Fiat Currency.

Chicago News.

In announcing labor's opposition to rapid inflation of the currency, President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, is in accord with many thoughtful observers of the growing clamor for fiat money.

Mr. Green's opposition is based on his desire to protect the buying power of the Nation's workers. When the printing presses run without regard to sane monetary principles, the cost of living soars out of reach of wage earners' pay envelopes. Not even the daily wage readjustments in the early days of the German republic could keep pace with the mad uprush of commodity prices. Wages expressed in terms of what they would buy shriveled lamentably.

The Handicap.

Kansas City Times.

Certain financial authorities insist that impractical provisions in the new securities act are preventing the financing of capital goods industries at a time when their activities are essential to getting men back to work.

Perhaps this is a correct diagnosis. There may be need of amendments in the act now that it has been put to the test. But it seems a fair assumption that uncertainty about the value of the dollar might be the most important factor in preventing the sale of securities. Certainly people will hesitate about making investments until they have confidence in the future of the currency.

Along the Potomac

With

Carlisle Bargeron

IT IS doubtful that the resignation of Mr. Nutt as treasurer of the Republican national committee foreshadows, as the political observers contend, a reorganization of the committee; that, in fact, it foreshadows anything. There will be sometime, soon or late, a reorganization, but these committee reorganizations seldom begin with the treasurer.

BARGERON.

In the selection of a Mr. Getz as Mr. Nutt's successor, however, there is seen a move of shrewd and national import, very probably an effort of the Republican publicity man, Mr. Cal O'Laughlin, to get the Republicans in the papers again.

No paragrapher in the country will be able to resist the play on Mr. Getz's name, with such cracks as it is hoped that Mr. Getz, who has been named to get money for the Republican's, really getz some. In this way attention of thousands of people will be called to the fact there is a Republican party. It will be an astounding revelation, too.

• • • •

IN so far as Mr. Nutt's going is concerned, it is no more than an intensely human story, the story of another chapter in a man's life, and to him extremely interesting.

Here is a man who believed in the policy of broadening one's acquaintance long before Mrs. Roosevelt publicly advocated it. The thing to do, thought Mr. Nutt, was to be always extending one's scope of associates. It is the way to develop and to steadily add to one's store of life.

• • • •

HE was a banker whose acquaintances naturally were largely of other bankers and men who wanted to borrow money. A lot of bankers are satisfied to lead the sheltered existence of their trade.

But not Mr. Nutt. He knew that life held interest outside the counting marts.

So when the opportunity came to him to meet and know and to associate with politicians he grabbed it with the enthusiasm of a 16-year-old child.

• • • •

YOU can tell from his letter of resignation that he feels the experience has greatly enriched his life. For more than four years he had the experience of going around with politicians, of hearing them talk and listening to their jokes, of hearing them describe in their fascinating way the little tricks they play upon their constituencies.

He must have picked up a collection of stories with which he can regale his cronies in the Cleveland clubs for the rest of his life. "When I was in politics," he can say, and his fellow bankers, realizing that Joe has one on them there, will listen with wistful respect.

• • • •

THEY were not normal times through which Joe served, either. He was the treasurer from whom the boys got the money to put into Nebraska to try to defeat George Norris, to pour into the South in the religious campaign of 1928.

Gosh, but it must have been fun for him to be on the "inside" during those times!

Such characters, too, as must have come before him with hat in hand and ideas on how to spend money. An absorbing lot they are, he will undoubtedly relate in his reminiscences at the club.

From the contented tone of his letter the impression is inescapable that Mr. Nutt considers his experience exactly the one to give him a well rounded out life. There is particularly a glow of pride in his statement that he seved under four national chairmen. They were, in turn, Dr. Work, Claudius Huston, Simeon Fess and Everett Sanders. What a fascinating association that must have been!

One hopes he didn't fail to get autographed photographs from each of them.

Happiness.

Now when it comes to happiness I find that I can be Forgetful of my many cares in gracious company.
I do not need a dervish dance to drive away the gloom, Nor do I want a loutish crew to crowd my living room.
I'll gather all the joy I crave until my journey ends
From neighboring with kindly folk and visiting with friends.

I like my share of honest fun, of laughter and of song,
But I won't guzzle pleasure's cup
when it is brewed too strong.
I need no thrills of madness to relieve my weight of care.
I can forget my troubles in some good friend's easy chair.
And I can have a happy time in a sane and simple way Without inviting sorrow and remorse to mar my way.

Old Webster says that pleasure is a happy state of mind,
And there are countless pathways here for man that state to find.
I need no wild excitement to drive
wearying care away,
Despite the scornful critics and the things they often say,
There's much that makes for happiness upon this troubled earth
In good old-fashioned decency and good old-fashioned mirth.

Bond Payment Plan Discussed With President

Roosevelt Promises U. S. Aid in Collection of Foreign Securities.

A nongovernmental effort to protect interests of American investors in defaulting foreign securities was launched yesterday by citizens called to Washington by the President.

Groundwork for a privately controlled organization, independent of the "Corporation of Foreign Security Holders," authorized in the securities act, was laid at the White House conference.

As announced in yesterday's Post, the Federal "corporation" idea will be abandoned. In its place an organization of distinguished Americans will be set up to safeguard all that can be salvaged of the more than $2,000,000,000 held here in foreign securities defaulted or in interest arrears.

U. S. Will Give Aid.

Toward this organization, as toward all other American interests, the Government will give such aid as may be proper, a White House statement announced.

Philip La Follette, former governor of Wisconsin, and Frank O. Lowden, former governor of Illinois; Thomas D. Thacher, former solicitor general, and President Ernest M. Hopkins, of Dartmouth College, attended yesterday's White House conference.

Others participating included Laird Bell, of Fisher, Boyden, Bell, Boyd & Marshall, of Chicago; Hendon Chubb, of Chubb & Son, New York City; W. L. Clayton, Anderson, Clayton & Co., Houston, Tex.; John Cowles, publisher of the Des Moines Register and Tribune; Herman Ekern, former attorney general of Wisconsin; Mills B. Lane, of the Citizens and Southern National Bank of Savannah; Dean Orrin K. McMurray, University of California law school; Roland S. Morris, former Ambassador to Japan; J. C. Traphagen, president of the Bank of New York & Trust Co., and Prof. Quincy Wright, University of Chicago.

Baker is Absent.

Newton D. Baker, former Secretary of War, and J. Reuben Clark, jr., former Ambassador to Mexico, unable to come to Washington, sent letters indorsing the proposed "American Bondholders' Protective Committee." Former Secretary of the Navy Charles Francis Adams, also unable to attend, is expected to cooperate.

Preliminary to yesterday's White House conference, at which phases of the organization were discussed, a meeting was held at the Treasury Department. The State Department and the Federal Trade Commission were represented.

"This is a task primarily for private initiative and interests," read the White House statement.

"The traditional policy of the American Government has been that such loan and investment transactions were primarily private actions, to be handled by the parties concerned.

"The Government realizes a duty, within the proper limits of international law and international amity, to defend American interests abroad. However, it would not be wise for the Government to undertake directly the settlement of private debt situations."

Many in Default.

It was pointed out at the White House that the situation is one "of substantial concern." American funds were put at the disposal of more than 40 governments, and many of these now are wholly or partly in default.

The statement suggested possibility of "unfair discrimination" as compared with investors of other countries.

"It was decided therefore to call a small group to take upon themselves the patriotic duty of bringing into existence an adequate, effective and disinterested organization to carry on this work," read the White House announcement.

Convicted of Assault.

In Prince Georges County Circuit Court yesterday Amos Gus, colored, of Lakeland, Md., was found guilty of assault and battery on George Walls, colored, of Lakeland.

Famed Savant Named Chemist To Develop Tennessee Valley

Cottrell Gets Title as Chief After Serving Since Spring.

Dr. Frederick G. Cottrell, 3904 Ingomar avenue northwest, in charge of the Tennessee Valley Authority's fertilizer experimental activities since the agency was set up last spring, yesterday was given a title. The Authority named him chief consulting chemist.

Through his work in developing electrical precipitation processes for the separation of chemical properties from industrial gases, Dr. Cotrell is rated as one of the three outstanding chemists of the world, the others being Madame Curie and Sir Oliver Lodge.

Dr. Cotrell came to Washington in 1911 after years of teaching and experimental work in West coast universities to become chief physical chemist of the Bureau of Mines. He was the Bureau's director from 1920 to 1921, resigning to enter full service as chemical director of Chemistry and Chemical Technology of the National Research Council here.

At the close of the war he was selected to direct the Fixed Nitrogen Research Laboratory set up in the War Department to carry on experimental activities in connection with the war-time nitrogen plant at Muscle Shoals. He continued in this capacity when the laboratory was absorbed by the Department of Agriculture in 1922.

Dr. Cottrell began his precipitation experiments at the University of California in 1903, developing findings of Sir Oliver Lodge. In 1919 he received the Perkin award, having found 13 precipitation processes, the patents for which he had turned over to Research Corporation, a nonprofit organization, for industrial distribution. Proceeds from industrial use of Research Corporation patents are devoted to scientific study.

DR. FREDERICK G. COTTRELL.

Recently $4,000,000 was set aside for the use of the Tennessee Valley Authority for construction of fertilizer works at Muscle Shoals on condition that experiments now being directed by Dr. Cottrell establish the development as practical.

Culbertson on Bridge

Taking Stock of Your Resources.

It is my candid opinion that a study of the correct principles of play would result in the making of at least 20 per cent more contracts undertaken at the bridge table than are now made, provided, of course, that defense did not keep step with attack and the defending players study the basic defensive principles so well that they would make almost instinctively the correct opening leads and the correct subsequent plays. No person desiring to excel as a bridge player can afford to play in a haphazard way and without full consideration of the entire hand before even a card is touched in the Dummy. I have been making a rather extensive study of the subconscious methods of experts, and I can assure you that, whether they know it or not, the persons who are really expert in the play of the hand follow in the main the same general principles. To be a good Dummy player you must, of course, understand the fundamental principles of play, but you must at the same time attack each hand as an individual problem and take stock, or inventory if you prefer, of your resources and balance them against your liabilities. If the surplus is sufficient, then your contract is probably assured.

An interesting example of how a declarer, Mr. H. J. Schaefer, of Beaver Falls, Pa., followed these principles of the correct play of the Dummy is given in the hand below:

North, Dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

	♠ Q J 3 ♡ A 2 ◇ A K 10 8 ♣ A K 7 4
♠ K 10 5 4 ♡ K ◇ 9 4 3 ♣ Q 10 6 5 2	N W E S	♠ A 8 6 ♡ J 9 4 3 ◇ Q 6 2 ♣ J 9 3
	♠ 9 7 2 ♡ Q 10 8 7 6 5 ◇ J 7 5 ♣ 8

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
2◇	Pass	2NT	Pass
3♣	Pass	3♡	Pass
4♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

The bidding, as given above, I consider distinctly bad. North does not have an Opening Forcing bid of two, as his hand contains only 5½ honor-tricks and very barren distribution. Perhaps, however, it is just as well that the Opening bid was overenthusiastic as it gave Mr. Schaefer a chance for a very accurate play to produce a coup situation.

The Opening lead was the diamond 9, a "top of nothing" lead, and Mr. Schaefer took stock of his resources. Apparently he was due to lose two spade tricks, one or more trump tricks and a diamond. However, not discouraged, seeing a slight ray of hope, he won the first lead in Dummy with the diamond King. The Ace of hearts was now led from Dummy, his intention being to follow with the heart 2 and possibly finesse the heart Ten. When West played the heart King on the lead of the Ace, he could, of course, place the remaining hearts in the East hand, and decided the coup existed if East could be forced to trump ahead of him at any time or if he could be thrown in with a diamond near the end.

Proceeding on this assumption, Mr. Schaefer, after another round of hearts, on which he captured East's 9 with the 10, reentered Dummy with the club King and returned a small club, which was ruffed with the heart 6. He now led the diamond Knave, and on the bare chance that West did hold the Queen, finessed the suit when he failed to cover. East was in the lead and returned a small spade, which West won with the King, and returned the suit. East won this trick, but it was the last trick for East and West, as it was simple enough for South to again shorten himself and place the lead in the Dummy on the eleventh trick, thereby on the twelfth and thirteenth tricks completing the coup.

Historic Coach Room, Garden, Now Eating Spot

Harnesses of Long Forgotten Steeds Are Setting for Diners.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

A coach room, a stall room, saddle room and loft are in a Seventeenth street restaurant, set far back in a tangled garden of trees and shrubs.

Many years ago the building was a real, honest-to-goodness stable, and the present owner points out in the loft a beam that played its part in hoisting hay from the ground to the loft. The horses that ate that hay have been galloping in Elysian fields for more than half a century. But their harness still hangs on the walls of the saddle room.

The place has plenty of atmosphere, but it's of the lusty, masculine variety. It isn't one of those restaurants that are long on art and short on food. The menu has received its share of attention.

Let's take a look at the coach room. Quite in the manner of Merrie England are the David Copperfield drawings that adorn the walls. Candles in tin sconces cast an intimate glow over black tables, laid with colorful peasant linens. The floor's wide boards are 80 years old and the cane seats of the chairs are softened with age. Bright plaid drapes hang at the windows, looking out upon the garden.

In the stall room, where Dobbin munched his hay long ago, are high-backed booths, with tiny coach lanterns at their entrances. Overhead are heavy beams, blackened with age, and on the tables dark red cloths.

A delightful place for festive parties is the saddle room, on the second floor, with an old-fashioned cupboard in one corner.

An old wagon wheel, converted into a chandelier, a studio window with soft green drapes and a jolly fireplace make the loft a charming rendezvous.

Luncheon, tea and dinner are served in all four rooms. A typical 85-cent dinner consists of soup or cocktail, entree, three vegetables, salad, dessert and drink. In addition to the usual tea, coffee or milk, the beverage list includes cider. A satisfying sort of luncheon is served for 50 cents.

If the gas bill is getting out of bounds, a Dutch oven will go a long way toward bringing it under control. These funny, squat baking utensils will do roasts to a turn right on top the stove, using just one burner.

We felt like giving a joyous whoop when we found some for as low as 39 cents. Their measurements are 10½ inches long, 2 inches deep and 7½ inches wide. Of sturdy, iron-like material, they should see many a roast through to the golden brown stage.

One bargain whets our appetite for more. Here's the result of the merry, mad chase: A round, pure aluminum roaster for 50 cents; a pure aluminum kettle, two-quart capacity, and wire basket for French-frying potatoes, price, 50 cents. The roaster is 11 inches across and 4 inches deep.

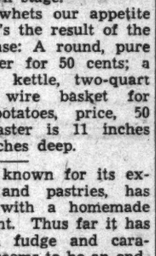
A bake-shop, known for its excellent breads and pastries, has blossomed out with a homemade candy department. Thus far it has concentrated on fudge and caramels, but there seems to be an endless variety to these two members of the candy family.

The fudge is made dark and chocolaty or light and mild, with big nuts or little nuts or no nuts at all. Usually sold at 60 cents a pound, it is on special sale today at 49 cents.

The caramels, in a wide assortment, are 60 cents a pound.

If you're in a quandary about a consolation prize for your next bridge party consider the sunflowers. They're in an F street shop. You may pick one for $1.

Heave a sigh for the poor can-opener. It's gradually dying from lack of use at a cozy little Twelfth street restaurant that serves fresh vegetables the year round. Here every noon gather people to whom a meal means more than gobbles and gulps. The surroundings are so pleasant that it's a temptation to spend the afternoon there.



Windsor chairs, oak tables and tile floor are in the main room. But do try a balcony window table.

Since the service is cafeteria style, it takes only a jiffy to select an appetizing meal. All bread, rolls, cakes and pastries are baked in the restaurant's kitchen.

"Hey, mother, can I have one of those yummy new buns in my lunch box today? Aw, gee, you'll have enough for Dad's breakfast if I take just one, won't you? Yes, I know Dad always eats three or four. Why don't you buy 'em by the barrel so's I could have all I want? What do you ask for when you buy 'em, mother? Pineapple buns? Seems funny that pineapple wrapped in dough could be so good. I guess the frosting has something to do with it. How much are they? Thirty-five cents a dozen? Gee, I wish you'd buy six dozen at a time."

Season for Doughnuts and Cider Opens With Halloween Festivities

By Ann Barrett.

Maybe you believe, as Eddie Cantor does, that there isn't any such thing as a closed season for doughnuts. But anyway, Halloween (October 30) is the doughnut's heyday. The date when these plump, brown fried-cake rings (probably the best known rings in the world—after wedding rings and telephone rings) come right out into the open and steal the show.

So now's the time to start casting an eye about—to see what grocer or baker or what home recipe will furnish doughnuts that are um-m-m!—from the first bite to the last crumb.

Commercially made doughnuts get better every year, I notice But so do home-made doughnuts. Because more and more women are taking pains to be precise about making them. Precise about deep-fat-frying equipment—as well as actual ingredients, measuring and mixing.

Frying Equipment.

What do I mean by correct frying equipment? First, a good heavy kettle with flat bottom and straight sides so it will stand firm. A ketttle that is deep in proportion to its width, so that fat won't spatter out or cool too quickly. Second, a frying basket for lifting the doughnuts out of the fat quickly—so they won't get too brown. Third, a deep-fat frying thermometer for telling you exactly how hot the fat is. And fourth, a long, two-tined fork for turning the doughnuts.

This equipment turns out mighty useful, too, when it comes to making just-right French fries, frittters, croquettes and so on. It will last a lifetime. And nowadays it's all moderately priced. So—if you like fried foods—I'm sure you'll find it a worthwhile investment.

More Signposts.

Besides this, choose frying fat or oil that will not smoke quickly or absorb flavors and odors. If you haven't a frying thermometer, heat the fat till it browns an inch-cube of soft bread in 60 seconds (370 F.). Drop your doughnuts in only a few at a time, because they swell like a sponge, and mustn't be crowded. Turn them as soon as they come to the top, and keep turning them, so they'll cook evenly. Drain them on unglazed paper, to get off the excess grease.

In the matter of mixing and shaping, its important not to have one bit more flour in or on your doughnuts than you actually need to roll them out. Chilling them before rolling helps to cut down on the amount of flour. Pat (or roll) the dough ¼ inch thick. Cut with floured cutter (3 inches across is regulation size). Cut out all your doughnuts before you start frying. Slip them into the fat upside-down—that is—so the side that was up, off the board, enters the hot fat first.

Now I see I cut myself a chunk of work when I started to read off all the rules for making prize doughnuts. These are the most important. The rest, I'll pack up into my recipe bulletin. Because maybe you're rarin' to go—and what are rules, without an actual recipe?

In this standard recipe (which you can vary a number of ways) you start with ¼ cup butter. Cream this thoroughly with 1 cup sugar. Then add 3 well-beaten eggs and beat up the whole mixture with a wooden spoon. Next, measure 3 level cups of sifted pastry flour. Mix this with 3½ teaspoons baking powder, ½ teaspoon cinnamon, ¼ teaspoon nutmeg, ½ teaspoon salt and sift again. Then add dry ingredients to first mixture alternately with ½ cup milk. Now chill this mixture at least 30 minutes in the refrigerator. Then turn it out onto a lightly floured board and add only enough more flour so that you can knead the mixture into a soft dough. Next pat or roll this lightly to ¼ inch thickness. Then cut out all your doughnuts and proceed merrily to frying, as directed. I say merrily because those will be doughnuts!

Cider Hot-Spice.

And the something to serve with them for Halloween hijinks is, of course, cider. Particularly if you give it a bit of mystery by hot-spicing it like this: Heat up the following all together in a saucepan—2 quarts cider, 2 cups brown sugar, 3 two-inch pieces stick cinnamon, ½ tablespoon each whole clove and all-spice, 1 piece mace, ¼ teaspoon salt and a few grains of cayenne pepper. Boil 15 minutes, strain and serve hot. (Makes 8 or more glasses, depending on size.) If you should not like quite such a sweet drink, add fruit juice—orange, lemon, grapefruit—to suit your own taste. Then just heat up the drink again.

Winning Recipe Gives New Idea For Pineapple

Constant Reader Tells How to Pickle It to Serve With Roast.

There are many ways in which pineapples can be used in menus. They furnish attractive desserts, good salad material and now a constant reader of the Saturday Food Page of The Washington Post sends in the winning recipe of the week, which calls for "Delicious Pineapple Pickle."

Mrs. M. L. Turner, P. O. Box 33, of Berwyn, Md. is the fortunate winner of this week's $5 prize for the best recipe. It is as follows:

Delicious Pineapple Pickle.

2 medium sized cans of sliced pineapple (Sanitary)
3 cups of sugar
2 tablespoons of white vinegar (Sanitary)
1 tablespoon of whole cloves
1 tablespoon of whole mixed pickle spices
2 tablespoons of stick cinnamon

Drain the juice from the pineapple into a preserving kettle. Then add the sugar, vinegar and spices, and bring to a boil. Add the slices of pineapple carefully so as not to break it. When it starts to cook place over a slow fire and cook until the fruit is clear and the sirup thick and rich. Place slices in wide-mouth jar and seal.

This is delicious served with roast chicken. When serving cut each slice into six or eight pieces.

Prints for Evening Show Chinese Note

Oriental Designs Used on New Chiffons and Crepes.

Prints on satin and quadrille chiffon as well as on crepes are excellent for dinner and evening wear. Plenty of bright color glows in large or medium floral designs which show Chinese and Japanese influences with brush strokes, apple blossoms, chrysanthemums and bamboo shoots.

Although one-color designs are waning in popularity, there are still a large number of interesting ones, including those with thick, wavy crossbars, stripes, scallops and plaidings. The floral design, with a fairly even mixture of color, is, of course, the old standby. It has been reversed in several instances, with the result that overlapping blocks or disks in black, navy or brown almost blot out white backgrounds.

Barnard Dean Attacks Back-to-Kitchen Tendency

Daughters of Today Are Deprived of Schooling for Sons, She Insists.

New York, Oct. 20 (AP).—Dean Virginia C. Gildersleeve, of Barnard College for Women, Columbia University, took issue today with parents who keep their daughters at home in order to finance college educations for their sons.

"Sending John to college instead of Jane," she said, "is a sound policy only in the event that John has the richer possibilities.

"It is well for us to be forced by shortage of school finances to judge our work anew and to have to cut away luxuries and cling to necessities.

"But some of us seem to think that the higher education for women is one of those things we can throw overboard."

She had received many letters, she said, which begin: "I am sorry, I can not continue my studies at Barnard this year. We have lost our money. My younger brother John is just ready to enter college and it seems more important to educate him."

Dean Gildersleeve compared this attitude to the "recrudescence of two ancient and, I believe, fallacious ideas held somewhat widely and vaguely by the Nazi in Germany and the Fascisti in Italy.

"These are," she said, "that women must go back to the kitchen—or homes—and that when they get back they need no education but the three R's, perhaps a little language and music and domestic science.

"In the first place, the majority of women have never really left their homes.

"Besides, all the best—and educated—powers of mind and spirit are required in the arts of home-making and child-rearing. A mother or wife needs above all to be a wise and interesting human being, with imagination, poise and a grasp of what is important in life.

"As to politics," Dean Gildersleeve said, "whether most women continue in the kitchen or not, they will certainly continue to have votes. And they assuredly need some education to play a useful part in our political life.

New Sports Blouses Unusual in Design

Riding high on the crest of fashion are sports blouses, practical and washable. Favored materials include satin striped handkerchief-weight linen, plaid lawn, flannel, and a new seedy linen that is firm enough to tailor crisply.

Among the types are a double-breasted version of the polo shirt; a short-sleeved, square-yoked affair; a belted, hip-length model; and one with a wide belt at the normal waistline.

Herrick's Wife Always Chose His Neckties

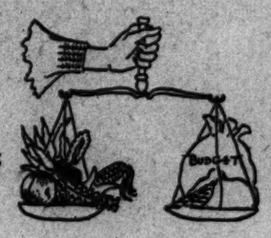
The late Myron T. Herrick, Ambassador to France, was fond of telling a story about the way he got past the crucial test of having his wife select his neckties not long after their marriage.

"Not long long after our marriage," said Ambassador Herrick, "my wife began to occupy herself with my wardrobe. She asked me one day where I kept my cravats. I said, 'They must be around here somewhere.'

"When I came home that night I saw half a dozen neckties spread out on the bed. I looked them over, picked out a blue polka dot and said, 'Suppose we take this one.' 'But I bought all of them for you,' she cried.

"I didn't say anything," concluded Mr. Herrick, "but I knew from that moment I was done for and I never protested again."

The Family Marketer



Low-Cost Meals Appetizing If Menus Are Well Planned.

For today the Marketer has planned two low-cost menus, one for tonight, and one for Sunday. The first will require little preparation, so if you get your shopping for Sunday done early, the rest of the day will be free.

Before you go to market, stop in a downtown bakery and get a loaf of their delicious Boston brown bread. Or you can get the bread canned in a chain store. It is excellent toasted, or can be made into dainty cream-cheese sandwiches for afternoon tea.

If you bake your own beans, a northeast market sells them for 5 cents a pound; canned pork and beans sell in the chain stores at 25 cents for six.

Iceberg lettuce, good firm heads, is found at the same market for 10 cents a head. Home-grown lettuce is 5 cents.

If you buy a leg of lamb for Sunday, you can use it sliced cold Monday, and Tuesday in stew or croquettes. A market butcher sells it for 18 cents a pound. A 5-pound leg will serve a family of four about three meals, cutting the meat cost down to 30 cents a meal. Salt pork for your beans is 25 cents for two pounds.

What is lamb without mint jelly? Like Thanksgiving turkey without cranberry sauce. A 10-ounce jar of mint jelly is marketed for 15 cents.

Okra is priced at 10 cents a quart, potatoes at 25 cents for 10 pounds.

The black walnut meats that may be used for Sunday's dessert can be bought in an Italian stall in the same northeast market. They are 39 cents a pound.

What's this? Eggs at 22 cents a dozen!

Caramel Pudding.

Mix 1 cup dark brown sugar, ½ teaspoon salt, 2 tablespoons flour; add 1 beaten egg and 1½ cups milk. Cook in top of double boiler until thickened, stirring constantly. Pour into mold and chill.

This may be served attractively by pouring the warm pudding over black walnut meats which have been placed in the bottom of sherbet glasses. If desired, serve with whipped cream.

This dessert may be made today, put in the ice box and forgotten until you are ready to serve it.

Birthday This Month For Women's Magazine

October marks the sixtieth birthday of the first of the modern magazines for women. It was in October, 1873, that the Woman's Home Companion inaugurated the idea of a specialized periodical for women, devoted entirely to their social, domestic, educational and literary activities and pursuits. Out of this beginning has blossomed a vast progeny of printed pages. Even the women's pages of the modern newspaper perhaps owe their original inspiration to this source.

The anniversary has a distinct significance, because for the American woman the past 60 years marks a definite epoch. It marks the emergence of women from an old, narrow, cramping sphere of purely domestic activity to a new sphere of almost unlimited opportunity, an emergence built on their release from constant manual toil.

Books

Largest Book in the World Unveiled at Ceremony in New York.

The largest book in the world was unveiled Monday on the bandstand in Union Square, New York. It weighs 2,330 pounds, measures 7½ feet in width, and 3½ feet in thickness. Eventually the tome will contain the signatures of millions of people who oppose war, gathered by an organization called "World Peaceways," which sponsored the ceremony. Mr. S. Klein, famous "On the Square" purveyor of fashions to economical buyers, performed the unveiling. In this he was assisted by Gov. Pinchot's daughter and Mrs. T. M. Durlach, president of "World Peaceways."

Yesterday the Women's Home Companion was 60 years old, and celebrated the event with an anniversary issue.

"Toward Liquor Control," a book giving the results of a world-wide survey sponsored by John D. Rockefeller, jr., and made under the direction of Raymond B. Fosdick, wartime chairman of the committee on training camp activities, and Albert B. Scott, will come off the Harper presses very soon. If the book will aid harassed legislators in dealing with the imminent flood of drink, it can scarcely come soon enough.

Now in the twenty-sixth hospital he has entered as a patient, Frank Scully is recovering from a minor operation in New York. There can be no doubting his authority to write "Fun in Bed" and "More Fun in Bed."

"THE STORY OF RUSSIA," by Birger Richard Headstrom; Frederick A. Stokes Co., $3.50.

Russia is the traditional friend of America—at least if the facts in "The Story of Russia" are to be accepted as conclusive evidence.

In the spring of 1863 there was a strong possibility that either England or France would support the cause of the Confederacy in the American Civil War and thus turn the tide of fortune from the Union. At this critical time a Russian battle fleet steamed into New York Harbor prepared to uphold the policy of friendship established during the American Revolution.

During the Revolution Russia's act of armed neutrality against the English admiralty had greatly helped the cause of American independence. On subsequent occasions, negotiations for the purchase of Alaska, and United States mediation in the settlement of the Russian-Japanese war further cemented the bond existing between the two nations.

These instances provide examples of the interesting sidelights that illumine the pages of Mr. Headstrom's complete, yet concise, history, in which he has traced the course of Russia from the fifth century B. C. up to and including the spring of the present year.

A clear exposition of the various international pacts, treaties and other alliances, and their subsequent bearing upon world affairs, provides a valuable criterion upon which to base opinions for or against America's participation in such international associations.

The shadow of the great Russian Bear has been cast directly upon the pages of history of practically every nation. At times it has been a beneficient shade. Again, it has blotted out the light of liberty and hope for conquered peoples.

Mr. Headstrom draws the reader with him along the paths that have been trod by Rurik, the Norseman, who made the beginning of a nation among the warring Slavic tribes—in the footsteps of St. Vladimir, of Ivan the Terrible, Peter the Great, and the host of other mighty figures who painted the ever-changing map of early Europe.

The writer frequently pauses to picture the economic and political situation of Russia's people during the wars with Turkey, Sweden, Poland, Germany and the Napoleonic conflicts. He analyzes the business and social lives of the Russian masses—their ideals, religious beliefs and ambitions, as well as those of the ruling classes, and pictures the growing national consciousness and power that was, in turn, reflected in Russia's international influence.

In every instance, however, Mr. Headstrom confines himself to a terse but interesting presentation of facts. Thus, in the chapters devoted to the government of the Soviets, he betrays neither sympathy nor prejudice to the ideas and policies of the followers of Lenin, but gives a clear and unbiased view of the triumphs and failures of the new regime.

Admitting an inability to properly pronounce the polysyllabic Russian names, this is a book that will prove interesting and readable to school children of advanced grades as well as to mature students of geographical, political and military history.

The surprising fact is that the author has condensed such an authoritative and complete history into a mere 517 pages, excluding a complete index and 12 full-page illustrations in beautiful colors.

GEORGE H. BARROWS.

Painting of Chess Game Gift to Miss Boardman

In the home of Miss Mabel Boardman, of Red Cross fame, at 1801 P street northwest, is a unique painting, much admired by her friends.

It is a portrait of a man and a woman playing chess, attired in the style of the middle nineteenth century. Looking on at the game are two charming young women. The figures in the portrait are of members of Miss Boardman's family. The chess players are Joseph A. Sheffield, the grandfather of Miss Boardman, who founded Sheffield Scientific School at Yale University, and his wife, Ellen Sheffield. Other members of the family are portrayed in the spectators. The portrait was painted in Dresden in 1856 by Prof. Heubner, head of the National Gallery there.

It was a gift to the Sheffields by the artist as a surprise. Both Mr. and Mrs. Sheffield were devoted to chess and played many a round. Mrs. John A. Porter, their daughter, later gave the portrait to Miss Boardman, who treasures it as one of her most precious possessions.

Cheaper Meat Cuts as Rich In Nutrition

Housewife Finds They Add to Variety and Economy of Menus.

By Ruth Chambers.

In the general rearrangement of household budgets which has become necessary in these days if the outlay for food is to be in proportion to the diminished income, the clever housewife is able to use economy without sacrifice of the food value provided by an essential part of the family diet.

She does this by making use of the less demanded cuts of meat which are as nutritious and full of flavor as the tenderloins and steaks but which, because they contain more connective tissue, require little more time and care in cooking.

The tender cuts are cooked by dry heat, as in roasting and broiling. Since this method of cooking hardens connective tissue, moist heat applied slowly and for a long time is used instead of less tender cuts.

Try Some of These.

In ordering beef, instead of asking for steaks, tenderloin or rib roasts, try a rump roast, chuck roast, flank, neck or ground meat. In pork, ask for shoulder, spareribs, ham hocks, salt pork, fresh butts, bacon squares or ends, pig's feet, liver or heart.

In lamb some of the less demanded cuts are shoulder, stew meat, heart. Try shoulder, stew veal breast or veal shanks.

The methods of cooking the less tender cuts are by cooking in water (simmerings), by stewing (meat cut in small pieces), by braising, and also in soup making, that is, extracting all the juice possible.

To Simmer Meat.

In simmering, the meat is put on in a kettle of water of a temperature of 185 degrees F. Do not use a high degree of heat, for that will cause the protein to coagulate and the meat will be less juicy and less well flavored than if simmered. There should be no movement in the water, no bubbling.

To Stew Meat.

There are three ways of stewing meat. The pieces may be well browned in a small amount of fat before the water is added. This is known as a brown stew. The flavor and aroma similar to broiled or roasted meat is thus obtained.

The second way is to plunge the meat into boiling water and then reduce the temperature to the simmering point. The third way is to put the meat into cold water and increase the temperature gradually to 185 degrees F. The meat is cooked until it is tender. This stew will have a highly flavored broth.

To Braise Meat.

Braising is a method satisfactory for cooking large pieces from the less-tender cuts. The meat is browned well on all sides. For these pieces of meat, it may be well to add fat in searing. To obtain this, try out some of the suet from the meat. After the meat is well browned, add a little water and continue cooking slowly until tender.

Examples of braised meat are potroast, Swiss steak and fricassee. Pork chops and veal cutlets are best cooked by braising.

For soup making, the soup bone should be cracked and the meat cut in small pieces so that the juices may escape readily. This meat from which soup is made loses very little of its food value and should be used in combination with other highly flavored foods.

Braised Shoulder of Veal.

Dredge a shoulder of veal with flour and brown well on all sides in a roaster in which fat has been melted. Surround with three large carrots, diced, and a sliced onion. Season with salt and pepper, cover and cook in a moderate oven. It will require three or four hours to cook, depending on the size of the piece of meat.

Fresh Pork Cooked With Vegetables.

1 fresh pork butt
4 large carrots, cut lengthwise
4 large parsnips, cut lengthwise
1 small cabbage, quartered
½ teaspoon salt
1-3 teaspoon pepper

Cook pork butt by simmering for one and one-half hours. One hour before serving put in the vegetables and cook until tender. Cut the pork in slices and arrange in the center of a platter. Arrange the vegetables around the meat.

Beef Pot Roast With Prunes.

Brown a chuck pot-roast in fat in a hot kettle. Season with salt and pepper. Add 2 cups of boiling water and 3 dozen prunes which have been soaked overnight. Simmer until meat is tender. Take out the prunes and season them with sugar and vinegar or lemon juice and serve them as a relish with the meat. Thicken liquid in kettle for gravy.

Homespun Was Worn At First Inaugural

The dress worn by Martha Washington at the time of the first inauguration of her husband, George Washington, was made on the busy looms at Mount Vernon, which still adorn the spinning house of the historic mansion, and may be seen by tourists visiting this shrine today.

Gen. Washington, too, wore at his inauguration a full suit of fine cloth, the handiwork of his own household.

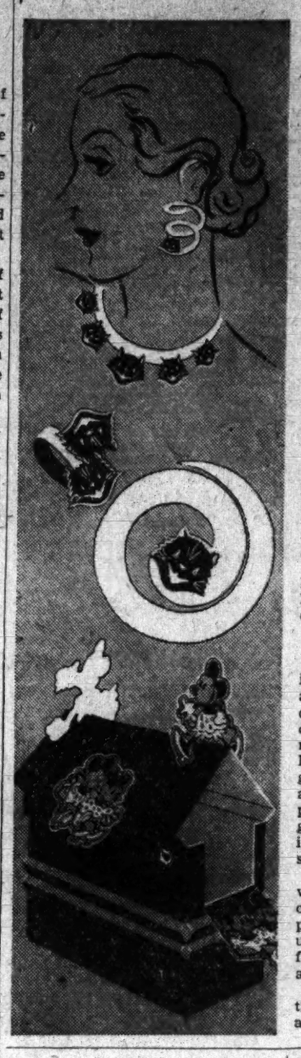
Mrs. Washington did not always appear as a grande dame. At a ball given in her honor in New Jersey she wore "a simple russet gown" and white handkerchief about her neck.

On another occasion Mrs. Washington wore a dress composed of cotton, striped with silk, and entirely home made. The silk stripes in the fabric were woven from the ravelings of brown silk stockings and old crimson chair covers.

What's in Fashion?

Grinning Paper Pumpkins, Ghosts, Cats Make Halloween Party Planning Easier

Directed by Amos Parrish.



Information as to where articles of the type illustrated and their variations are available in Washington will be given by the Fashion Department, The Washington Post, on request.

Giving the children a Halloween party isn't such a chore as it used to be. You can get the whole thing now all planned and wrapped up for you. Not to mention all kinds of separate gadgets that make decorating simpler.

Ask the children if they'd like to have a Mickey Mouse party and hear the shrieks go up. This party package holds everything but the cider and apples. Table cloth, napkins, cut-outs of Mickey and Minnie, a "Pin the Nose on Mickey" game and a book full of other stunts. You can see the lively centerpiece in the bottom right sketch.

If they want something spookier, the witch party box will suit them better. It has a witch's outfit, a luminous skeleton which will be good for a little pleasant hair-raising, tissue paper ghosts, napkins, games and a Halloween book.

A less elaborate party package has a grand big crepe paper pumpkin for a centerpiece, cat heads and crepe paper moss and a game book.

Paper Jewelry.

The new Halloween jewelry is an idea for favors. It's cut on the apple peeling principle and decorated with cats that grin like your old Cheshire friend. (There it is, necklace, earring, ring and bracelet, in the sketch at right.) In fact, grins seem to be the fashion with all this season's ghosts, cats and pumpkins. They have given up the gloom of their ancestors and burst into broad, two-or-three-toothed smiles.

If you want pumpkin decorations without the trouble of hollowing out real ones, get some of the crepe paper species that can be pumped up like paper bags. These are effective when sprinkled generously around a room.

Puppies are getting in on the fun this year, too. One bright orange and black table cover we've seen had them hobnobbing with pumpkins and cats in the design.

Decorating Gadgets.

Gummed eyes and noses and mouths that you stick on honest-to-goodness pumpkins . . . pumpkin napkins that you can use for other decorating notions . . . a handsome cardboard cat . . . these and dozens of other gay paper gadgets are ready to be converted into some of the grandest, most easily concocted parties you ever saw.

Paper Costumes.

Crepe paper costumes are a help, too. We saw one that made a splendid ghost (lower left) . . . and gave us an idea for a party. A sort of ghost walk, with each guest receiving a ghost costume at the door. "Murder" would be an appropriate game to play.

Leaflet of Halloween Games.

You probably know how to play "Murder," but in case you don't we've given the instructions . . . along with a lot of others for newer games and stunts . . . in a new Halloween leaflet. It will help you out with your party . . . whether your guests are children or grown folk.

If you send the filled-in coupon and inclosures at once, we'll send you the leaflet.

Amos Parrish,
The Washington Post Fashion Bureau,
500 Fifth avenue, New York.

I inclose stamped, self-addressed return envelope and 3 cents in loose stamps. Please send me your leaflet on "Games and Stunts for My Halloween Party."

Stoopnocrats Getting Ready For Wet Days

Plan to Celebrate End of Prohibition With Charity Dinner.

New York, Oct. 21 (AP).—New York's leaders of fashion have started planning a celebration for the expected demise of prohibition. Assuming December 6 to be the right date, they're holding a dinner that night at the Waldorf-Astoria.

The recently incorporated Society of Stoopnocracy, now seven months old, is sponsoring it. The society is based on Ye Ancient Order of Froth Blowers, the charitable organization founded in England many years ago and extended throughout the empire by the late Sir Alfred Fripp, surgeon to King George. Following in its English predecessor's steps, the Society of Stoopnocracy devotes its profits to the "white collar" unemployed and needy.

George Gordon Battle, eminent lawyer, is general chairman of the proposed dinner, and Mrs. George B. St. George, jr., Mrs. George H. Warren, jr., William Ziegler, T. F. Davies Haines, and Bradford Norman, jr., are vice chairmen. The menu will, of course, be arranged by the famous Oscar.

What to wear when repeal arrives is a question bothering many smart women these days. The new "wine colors"—sherry and port; the cordial tints—blackberry and cherry, and the liqueur shades—chartreuse, benedictine and creme de menthe—are certain to have a great vogue—in fact they're already being worn in the town's smartest spots.

At the recent wedding of Miss Mabel Smithers, society debutante, and E. Bonner Bowring, of the Shipping family, held on Long Island, the bridesmaids wore those yellow and green chartreuse colors in their costumes.

Dean Shure Finds Folk Melodies in Jamaica

Plans to Incorporate Native Love Song and Bush Theme in Suite.

Blue-eyed, hawk-nosed American composer, R. Dean Shure, narrowly escaping revolution-quelling bullets in Havana, landed in Jamaica two month's ago to make a study of Jamaican folk music. He planned to incorporate its melody and theme in a suite of organ music.

He found he had arrived not a moment too soon. American jazz has reared its insidious head. Has, in fact, completely taken the towns.

Composer Shure—who has been for 12 years choirmaster at the Mount Vernon Place M. E. Church South, at Ninth street and Massachusetts avenue in Washington—had to penetrate far back into the hill country, among the hill towns of the island, before he could find Jamaican music untainted by jazz or saxaphone.

"Three beautiful melodies I captured. 'Caribbean Night Song,' which is something of a racial love song; 'The Banana March,' sung in chorus by natives when loading the ships; and the 'Billing Bush Song,' which they sing when chopping bananas for market.

"Before their introduction to the saxaphone, the natives played their simple themes on two percussion instruments they made themselves. One resembles the American guitar, on a larger scale; the other is a hand drum made from a large cocoanut, halved and covered with sheepskin."

Some years ago Dean Shure made a similar excursion to Bermuda, and brought back material for a lovely suite of organ music in four pieces, "The Enchanting Isle."

Football Heroes Fear Girls More Than Grid

Jacksonville, Ill. (U.P.).—Steady girl friends are taboo with prospective football players at Illinois College, according to Coach LaRue Van Meter.

Van Meter laid down the law recently when one of his outstanding freshmen athletes quit school and returned to his home, the thoughts of the girl he left behind being stronger than the call of the gridiron.

"Next spring I'm going to lay down the law to any prospective freshmen I may interview," Van Meter said. "I'm going to caution them against keeping company with any one girl. There's safety in numbers, but a steady date is just another coach's nightmare."

Snuff Still on Hand For Use of Senators

Despite the fact that snuff went out of fashion during the Victorian era, two snuff boxes in the United States Senate chamber are still filled with fresh snuff daily when this august body is in session.

So far as is known, no senator indulged in this habit in the present Congress.

Another proof that the Senate is a conservative body is shown in the fact that until a very short time ago a little glass box filled with sand was kept on each senator's desk, just as in the days before blotting paper was known of or used in convenient sizes as glorified advertising material.

Teacher All Alone.

Silverton, Oreg. (U.P.).—Last summer when the school board of Bridge Creek district, near here, hired Miss Mollie Butler to teach, they thought there would be six pupils in school. Then the two families with children moved out of the district. Miss Butler's contract is legal, says the county superintendent, but, to be sure, she goes to the schoolhouse each day, rings the bell and holds school by herself.

Toads Run Derby.

Chicago—Sponsored by the Kiwanis, some 500 great horned toads from Texas and Arizona are going to run a derby to raise money for underprizileged children. Post time will be Saturday.

Washington Women in Welfare Work

Mrs. Goldsmith Tireless in Many Branches of Jewish Aid.

Corner stone of Jewish welfare work in Washington and indefatigable worker for the Community Chest, Mrs. Charles A. Goldsmith is self-described as "63 years old and still going strong."

She is a member of the board and president of the Jewish Social Service Agency; member of the Board of Public Welfare (on penal and miscellaneous committee); member of the board of the Emergency Relief Committee, Hebrew Home for the Aged, Travelers Aid Society, Council of Foreign Relief, Council of Jewish Women and Jewish Welfare Federation. In addition Mrs. Goldsmith is a member of the executive committee of the Community Chest, vice chairman of the Women's Crusade, member of the Budget Committee, past vice president and member of the committee which brought the Chest to Washington.

Besides this work, Mrs. Goldsmith finds time to serve as financial secretary of the Jewish Foster Home, a national director for Jewish Consumptive Relief and a member of the special gifts unit of the Chest.

"The present-day situation is more serious than most people realize," she says. "Those who are not actually participating in the work being done for the needy must be convinced and must be educated.

Underwood & Underwood.

MRS. CHARLES A. GOLDSMITH.

The public must learn that there is a great need over and beyond what the emergency relief is doing.

"The 63 agencies of the Chest had most inadequate funds during the past year. This must be remedied or greater and more pitiful suffering will result. Special funds are caring for the unemployed, but they do not reach the unemployable, the sick, the families with inadequate incomes or the hospitals."

New Sandals For Evening High But Open

Lines Almost Like Oxford With Toes, Shanks, Heels Cut Out.

A radical departure from the ubiquitous sandal for evening wear, is a very open high-cut model that suggests an oxford. That doesn't mean that sandals are out. They're very much in, especially in skeleton types, with open toes, open shanks and open heels.

All sorts of materials in the leather fabric range are used for these "skeletons," the material and height of heel determining the time of day the shoe should be worn. As was to be expected, the sandal is extremely popular for resort wear. There are also a number of attractive styles for afternoon and some modified ones are suitable for street wear.

The suede kid or satin shoe in multi-color effects is extremely good for evening. Plain satin, crepe failles and novelty ribs, to be dyed, are also ace-high.

"Alice in Wonderland" At Central High

An enthusiastic interest throughout the city is being shown in many circles of society in the festival version of Lewis Carroll's immortal classic, "Alice in Wonderland," which will be given in Central High School Auditorium this afternoon with the same distinguished cast of Washington players that was seen in the original production last month in the National Sylvan Theater at the Washington Monument.

This will be a special children's matinee, at which school children throughout the city will be admitted for 10 cents, in order that they may have the privilege of actually seeing their beloved Alice and her Wonderland friends, outside their own story books. It is expected that many large groups of boys and girls from many of the leading schools in the city will attend this matinee.

Aluminum Tip Helps Monument to Shine

The tip of the Washington Monument, 555 feet and 5 and a fraction inches from the ground, is of aluminum. This fact always surprises visitors to the Monument until it is explained to them that aluminum was used for this purpose because it always remains bright.

"Laus Deo," two Latin words, are engraved on this tip, meaning, of course, "Praise to God."

Few persons know that the Washington Monument was dedicated in 1885, 102 years from the time Congress first voted that it should be erected. Work on it stopped after it had reached the height of 150 feet. It did not begin again for nearly 25 years. When its cornerstone was laid in 1848, Dolly Madison and George Washington Parke Custis, "the child of Mount Vernon" during the lifetime of Gen. Washington, were present.

Alligators in Rock River.

Rock Island, Ill.—They're finding alligators in the Rock River. The second one sighted was killed by Charles Hotchkiss, operator of an inn near Moline, Ill.

The theory of local anglers is that alligators were placed in the river by a Florida visitor who found his pets too large to be friendly.

Pretty Office Champion Says Brains Count

Girl Who Made Record at Exposition Uses Her Head.

New York, Oct. 19 (AP).—Eighteen-year-old Eleanor Reimer, of Cleveland, Century of Progress champion for office efficiency, said that common sense was the most important thing in a business office.

"Nor is it like school, where you expect praise when your work is finished," the 1933 high school graduate said. "In an office the only thing ever pointed out is your errors."

Miss Reimer, who has been doing office work since June, was seated at a typewriter at the National Business Show.

"The best way to get along is just to use your common sense," she said. "The man I'm working for has said, 'Just use your head, that's all that's necessary.'

"First thing, you must know the man for whom you are working. If he is agreeable you can use your common sense about nearly everything in the office. But if not, and he's stubborn, you must do the work the way he wants it done.

"After all, it is his work. And he's the man who pays your salary; and, too, if you wanted a recommendation he would be the one who would write it for you."

What Today Means

"Libra."

If October 21 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 6:30 to 8 a. m., from 11 to 11:40 a. m. and from 5:30 to 5:45 p. m. The danger periods are from 9:30 to 10:30 a. m., from 3:45 to 4:40 p. m. and from 7 to 8 p. m.

You will have to struggle for all that you get on this day. Things will not come easily, people generally will be inclined to block progress wherever possible and it is probable that you will have to work pretty much in the dark along certain lines. Friction in the home will prove disconcerting.

The child born on this October 21 will probably have very little to say, although he will think a great deal. He will be possessed of an unusual degree of wisdom and on more than one rare occasion he will drop very philosophic remarks. You will find this little one a hard worker and possessed of great powers of concentration; a good student and a willing worker about the house.

If October 21 is the date of your birth, you are more than likely a person who is well able to get along with others, first, because you are a shrewd judge of human nature and instinctively know how to handle people; secondly, because of a forceful but magnetic personality which enables you to win people over to your side. If you fail in business, it will be because of your faulty judgment, rather than because somebody went out of his way to block you. You are inclined to be the "backslapping" type of person, but without the usual insincerity that goes along with it. You are an adventurous person, but as you wander into new fields, you go prepared, with your course mapped out in so far as is possible, and ready for any emergency.

Born on October 21, you can not tolerate delay. You do not fuss and fume over slow progress, however, as long as there is reason for it. You enjoy straightening out complicated tangles. When problems difficult to solve come your way, you cast all else aside and set to it; you become so engrossed that time becomes of no consideration, discomforts and even meals are quite forgotten. When you are away from your work, you must have a complete change of thought. You go to the theater a lot and you like stories and books of a wild and lurid type. Your home means much to you.

Successful people born on October 21:

Paul A. Chadbourne, educator.
John E. Sweet, inventor.
James A. Beaver, soldier and governor.
Horace W. Robbins, artist, painter.
Margaret Mather, actress.
Will Carleton, poet and lecturer.

Wayne Wirgman, the Misses Harlow, Mrs. Richard McCarteney and her small daughters, Miss Fenella Castenado, Miss Marbury Beall.

Symbolic Fetish.

By Katherine W. Smith.

I found a penny yesterday
And put it in my pocket.
Today I lost a silver chain
And on it hung a locket.
Inside there was a photograph
Of one I love most dearly.
I value it too highly, now
I find that I am nearly Broken-hearted at the loss,
I know that I am foolish
To love a love that's long since dead—
I'm utterly high-schoolish.
Tomorrow I will have at least
The penny—if I'm clever
The penny will mean everything
The locket's lost forever.

Arched Brows Give Illusion Of Loveliness

Discreet Use of Tweezers and Pencil Gives Face New Expression.

It is often possible to improve upon nature where eyebrows are concerned. True, the bony structure can not be changed. Yet one can give an illusion of greater symmetry, length or width, through shaping and coloring the brows.

Even the expression of the face is affected by the contour of the eyebrows. They may be arched and changed to give either a studious or a flippant look, and to apparently change the entire facial structure.

The wise woman, however, does not attempt to change the shape of her brows radically. She improves upon nature only insofar as to eliminate ragged outlines. Those brow hairs which grow in alignment are emphasized, giving a cleaner, lovelier line.

When the brows are quite heavy and shapeless, it is best to have them arched first by an expert. Then, watch for the return of the excess growth, and pluck it out as fast as it appears. It's not such a painful process, if properly done. Hold the tweezers in the direction in which the hair grows and pull one hair at a time with a quick, steady, sweeping stroke.

As for the silky luster which adds such beauty to brows and lashes—it is attained by brushing. As often as face powder is applied the brows and lashes should be brushed, using a little vaseline.

Poe's Sister Buried In Unmarked Grave

In an unmarked grave in the plot belonging to the Epiphany Church Home for Women in Rock Creek Cemetery is buried Rosalie Mackenzie Poe, the only sister of Edgar Allan Poe, the American poet.

She died in Washington in 1874, while an inmate of the Epiphany Church Home for Women and her grave has never been marked by her family or friends.

Strangely enough, this same fatality surrounds other members of Poe's immediate family. His father, David Poe, jr., is buried in an unknown grave in Norfolk, Va. His mother, the beautiful Elizabeth Arnold Poe, rests in an unmarked grave in a now unknown portion of the graveyard of St. John's Church, Richmond, Va. Tradition says that her grave is near "the eastern wall."

For years the body of Virginia Clemm, Poe's child wife, rested in the vault of a friend in Fordham, N. Y., where she died. Baltimore friends and relatives had the body reinterred beside her husband in Westminster Churchyard, Baltimore, Md., some years ago.

Opera Club to Present "Chimes of Normandy"

Society at large, including especially the many music lovers in the Capital City, are tremendously interested in the plans of Mrs. Flora McGill Keefer and the Washington Opera Club to present "Chimes of Normandy" for two performances immediately preceding the Thanksgiving holidays in Roosevelt Auditorium, outstanding among our charming new auditoriums, and well adapted for the uses of local groups. The dates for "The Chimes" as it is familiarly called, have been selected; and already many advance reservations are being made for both Monday, November 28, and Tuesday, November 29.

President Acts To Terminate 'Captive' Strike

Roosevelt Enters Direct Negotiations With Mine Head.

President Roosevelt has started direct negotiations with Myron C. Taylor, U. S. Steel Corporation head, in an effort to terminate the captive-mine coal strikes of western Pennsylvania.

In applying White House power to bring peace to the coal fields, it was learned last night, the President is recognized as carrying out his promise of October 7 to step in and personally lay down peace terms in the event the steel people and the United Mine Workers failed to agree.

So far Mr. Roosevelt has written to Taylor, and Taylor has written to Mr. Roosevelt. As the result, the President is hopeful the impasse can be broken and agreement satisfactory to the miners and operators completed.

Whether the President handed down an ultimatum in his letter to Taylor was not revealed. However, it was learned Hugh S. Johnson, recovery administrator, and Donald R. Richberg, his chief counsel, have been working with the President on a plan to be used in the event settlement otherwise could not be obtained.

The strikes, which have delaysd the mining of hundreds of thousands of tons of coal, developed because of refusal of the steel interests to recognize the United Mine Workers which organize their mines, and continued after recognition was granted because of disputes involving check-weighmen and other matters.

Hoosier Gunmen Rob Police Station

Escape With Machine Gun; Believed Slayers.

Peru, Ind., Oct. 20 (AP).—Two gunmen invaded the Peru City Police Station late tonight, herded three officers into the basement and escaped with a machine gun, a high-powered rifle and two revolvers.

Last Saturday night three men obtained a machine gun, rifles and a number of revolvers from the Auburn Police Station.

Auburn officers have since said they believed the raiders resembled some of the ten convicts who escaped from the Indiana State Prison at Michigan City September 26.

Sheriff George Burke said he believes the two men were Charles Mackley, one of the fugitive convicts, and Harry Copeland, who is on parole from the Indiana prison.

Mackley and Copeland have been charged with first-degree murder in the recent raid on the Allen County Jail, in which Jess Sarber, sheriff, was shot and killed, and John L. Dillinger, alleged bank robber, was released.

Cuba Capital Arms On Strike Rumors

Additional Guns Mounted on Top of Palace.

Havana, Oct. 20 (AP).—Additional machine guns were mounted on top of the presidential palace and hotel and restaurant keepers laid in foodstuffs tonight as reports of a new general strike swept the capital.

What caused the strengthening of fortifications was not explained, but soldiers busied themselves placing sandbags around their machine gun nests.

Miami, Fla., Oct. 20 (AP).—Erasmo Delgado, former Cuban army officer, arrived here by airplane from Havana with a prediction there would be much more bloodshed and disorders and said he had fled for his life.

Universalists Invite Objectors to War

Worcester, Mass., Oct. 20 (AP).—The general convention of the Universalist Church added to its laws of fellowship today an article designed to give the conscientious objector against war the same protection in the Universalist Church that is given to the Society of Friends.

The new article, submitted by the Rev. L. Griswold Williams, of Barre, Vt., reads:

"Fellowship in this convention shall confer the right to interpret the general purposes and spirit of the Universalist faith as sanctioning refusal of all forms of military service if such refusal be based on conscientious grounds."

Sailor Dies Trying To Catch His Ship

San Francisco, Oct. 20 (AP).—Arriving at the Fort Mason pier just too late to board the Navy transport Chaumont, on which he was to have sailed for the Orient, Stephen Orban, gunner's mate, leaped off the pier today, swam after the ship and drowned.

Orban's desperate attempt to reach his ship was not noted for a few minutes in the hubbub of the sailing.

The seaman is survived by his mother, Mrs. Helen Orban, of Astoria, Long Island, N. Y.

Mt. Rainier Votes Today On Sunday Blue Laws

Mount Rainier today will decide at the polls whether its ancient blue laws shall be retained. Sunday motion pictures will be the main issue. The new ordinance, if passed, will legalize Sunday lectures, concerts, theatrical performances, and practically all sporting events.

Hyattsville recently voted by an overwhelming majority to abolish similar Sunday laws.

Kiwanians Bid Water Good-By As Beverage

Lynchburg Delegates Quaff Cup Filled From 48 States and Canada.

Lynchburg, Va., Oct. 20 (Spl.).—A farewell tribute to water as a dinner beverage was paid by Capital District Kiwanians at their fifteenth annual dinner meeting here tonight.

Quaffing an innocuous cocktail, made up of the finest water from every State capital and Canada, the District Kiwanians drank toasts to President Roosevelt and George V of England.

The water was sent by secretaries of Kiwanis clubs in State capitals and Winnipeg and Ottawa, and poured into the Capital District loving cup, from which it was served.

The honor guests were Edwin F. Hill, of Washington, district governor, and Mrs. Hill. James M. Lynch, of Florence, S. C., international trustee, delivered the main address.

Confidence was expressed by all those who sent water that it will be the last time Capital Kiwanians will need it.

Ballou's Report Reduced For Economy Sake.

Superintendents of Schools, like newspaper reporters, sometimes suffer the vengeance of a blue pencil.

Take, for instance, the case of Superintendent Frank W. Ballou. Each year he issues a bound report of 100 or so pages. This year, influenced by the trend toward economy, he wrote his report in 75 pages, and submitted the report to the District Commissioners.

The Commissioners decided that for the sake of economy reports of heads of District departments would all be included in one volume. To fit Dr. Ballou's report in this volume it will be necessary to cut it from 75 to 33 pages.

Public Works Agency Allots Two Billions

Thousands of Men Given Jobs, Administration Announces.

The Public Works Administration yesterday announced that more than $2,000,000,000 of its $3,300,000,000 fund set aside by Congress to increase employment had been allotted up to last Tuesday. Additional allotments since that date increased the total by several more millions, it was said.

Officials said the release of this fund for construction purposes has resulted in thousands of men being reemployed, including men put to work in factories, shops and shipyards.

Most allocations have been made to Federal agencies for work on roads, ships, in forests and on rivers and harbors, to employ men quickly. Construction on State and municipal projects has moved at a slower rate because of local conditions, officials said.

Highway allotments total $400,000,000 and huge allotments have been made for work on the upper and lower Mississippi and the Missouri Rivers. These include the first year's work on the Fort Peck dam and reservoir in eastern Montana.

Among allocations for dam building, irrigation and the production of hydroelectric power, were $63,000,000 for the Grand Coulee project in Columbia Basin, Washington; $20,250,000 for the Bonneville dam in Oregon; $50,000,000 to continue development of the Tennessee River project; $22,700,000 for the Casper-Alcova project in Wyoming, and $38,000,000 for Boulder Canyon.

Low cost housing allotments have been made for Boston, Philadelphia, New York, Cleveland, Indianapolis, St. Louis, San Francisco, Atlanta, Raleigh, Euclid, Ohio, and Hutchinson, Kans.

Applications are pending from other cities.

Plans are being pushed for the expenditure of $25,000,000 for subsistence homesteads as authorized by the National recovery act.

Rain Helps Officers Control 5,000 Miners

Springfield, Ill., Oct. 20 (AP).—A heavy downpour of rain aided authorities tonight in maintaining order among the dwindling ranks of some 5,000 Progressive Union miners and their wives, who marched to the capital.

Differences of opinion as to the union's course of action developed among its leaders at a mass meeting of several thousand members.

Three Out of 5 "Presumptive" Pensions Stop

President Adds 11 District Men to Review Claims of Veterans.

As special boards reached the half-way mark in reviewing "presumptive" claims for service-connected disability pensions, it appeared last night that 60 per cent of cases considered to date would be disallowed.

Meanwhile, the tremendous task of reviewing between 50,000 and 150,000 "presumptive" claims went forward throughout the country.

Appointment by the President of 11 more Washington men as alternate members of the special review board to consider veterans' claims in the District was announced yesterday by Frank T. Hines, administrator of veterans' affairs.

About 40 Per Cent Stay on Rolls.

They are Roy O. Hughes, district manager of the Equitable Life Assurance Society; Charles Arthur Barnard, former special attorney in the Internal Revenue Solicitor's Office; Clement L. Bouve, attorney; Elmore T. Burdette, banker; Herbert Corey, journalist; Edwin S. Hege, executive secretary, Council of Defense; Archibald R. McCallum, attorney; Lester G. Wilson, engineer; J. Robert Conroy, Justice Department agent; Charles B. Green and Frank C. Matson, attorneys.

Only unofficial estimates were available on the numbers of veterans who have succeeded in proving "presumptive" nature of their injuries. Available information indicated only 40 per cent of those examined would be granted further compensation.

Deadline May Be Extended.

October 10 was the deadline for boards to pass on the remaining cases, after which compensation of those not examined was to be discontinued. Administrator Hines has asked the President to extend this deadline until such time as the cases actually are passed upon.

Since March 20, those being reexamined have received 75 per cent of their former compensation. An extension order, in line with the administrator's recommendations, is expected this week.

Although every effort has been made to complete the revision before Congress returns, difficulty in organization of many of the boards has delayed the work.

Masons Reaffirm Education Request

Scottish Rite Favors New Federal Department.

The establishment of a Federal Department of Education, having a Secretary in the President's Cabinet, was urged yesterday by the Southern Supreme Council of Scottish Rite Masonry.

The council has long advocated the creation of this department and its position has been reaffirmed repeatedly at sessions in the Scottish Rite Temple. While progress has not been rapid the past two years, the committee on education reported it has not ceased its efforts.

Eagan Hanged After Rum Swig With Jazz Air for Death March

San Quentin, Calif., Oct. 20 (AP). With a swig of whisky under his belt for a "bracer" and a phonograph jazz tune for his death march, Dallas Eagan, 40, walked calmly up the 13 gallows steps in San Quentin Prison today and was hanged.

Eagan murdered William J. Kirkpatrick, of Battle Creek, Mich., in a Los Angeles holdup last July. He refused to be attended by a clergyman.

Eagan spurned a chance to ask Gov. James Rolph, jr., for clemency. Reporting to the governor, Warden L. L. Stanley said Eagan declined to seek a reprieve and that his only worry was what kind of liquor he could have on his march into eternity.

Rolph replied Eagan could have any kind of whisky he wanted, and "all he can stand up under" so that he could "go out happy."

Half an hour before the execution Eagan called for the whisky and took a small drink. He requested his body be turned over to the medical school of the University of California. "Perhaps it will help human misery," he said.

"Just a second, please," Eagan said, when his hour came. He turned on his phonograph and stepped forward lightly. Three witnesses had to be assisted from the death chamber.

3 Questioned As Fall Victim Nears Death

Auto Salesman Found Unconscious Beneath Apartment Window.

Mystery today cloaked the three-story fall of Clifton J. Day, 32, found unconscious early yesterday in an areaway beneath the windows of his apartment, 1604 Q street northwest.

While detectives continued to question three men found in Day's apartment, the man himself, still unconscious, is near death in Emergency Hospital.

Day was found early yesterday morning by George Burley, who occupies the apartment beneath the injured man's.

The men taken into custody, Warren Winders, 23; Houte M. Brown, 24, and Robert A. O'Neil, 22, told police they were asleep when Day fell from the window.

They could not explain the fact that the injured man was fully clothed when found. Day, the son of Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Day, of Jones Mill road, Chevy Chase, Md., was an automobile salesman.

Parents Urge School Change

Board Is Asked to Send All Johnson Pupils to Powell High.

Transfer of the entire Johnson School to the Powell Junior High School was asked of the Board of Education yesterday in a petition from the Parent-Teacher Association of the Powell.

The petition followed one presented by another group in September, which asked retention of part of the Johnson school for elementary children. The Board of Education granted this first request and retained two classrooms for kindergarten and first and second grade children. The Johnson school is across the street from the Powell.

The board now is informed by the Parent-Teacher Association that it was not acting on behalf of parents in granting the petition. Only 12 of the 100 petitioners were parents, it was claimed.

Yesterday's P.-T. A. petition was signed by more than 300 parents.

The petition asked the transfer be made by February 1.

25 Billion to Boom U. S. Called Possible

Milwaukee, Wis., Oct. 20 (AP).—Charles Hayden, New York banker, said today that the United States could risk $25,000,000,000 to help itself out of the depression if it could risk that much "to help France lick Germany."

Here to attend a directors' meeting of the Allis-Chalmers Co., Hayden urged a tremendous Federally directed credit expansion program.

Clan Gregor Hails Mayor of Fifties

W. B. Magruder Biography Regales Convention.

A biographical sketch of Dr. William Beanes Magruder, mayor of Washington in 1856-58, will be given in an address by C. C. Magruder at the final session of the twenty-fourth annual gathering of the American Clan Gregor Society in the Willard Hotel tonight.

Mayor Magruder, an ancestor of the speaker, gained historical prominence for his fight on the "Know Nothings," a religious-political group. The clan, in session here since Friday, last night heard the annual address of its chieftain, Egbert Watson Magruder, of Norfolk, and a program of music.

Today's activities will include a pilgrimage to Stoneyhurst, home of the late Samuel Brewer Magruder, the members being guests of Mrs. Frank Pelham Stone, and an address by Kenneth Dann Magruder.

Mrs. Milo Kennedy's Auto Is Damaged

The name of Milo J. Kennedy, park policeman beaten to death last year at Logan Circle, figured yesterday in the records of the department he served.

An automobile owned by Mrs. Milo Kennedy, 1361 Euclid street northwest, widow of the officer, was damaged when it skidded near Highway bridge in attempting to avoid collision with a truck. The car was driven by Robert L. Kingan, 1242 Eleventh street northwest.

The three men convicted of his murder were to have been electrocuted yesterday at District Jail. They were given a stay until November 29.

Bingham Sees Need for Work On 2 Airports

Terms Fields "Disgrace" and Urges Loan in N. A. A. Address.

Terming both Bolling Field and the Washington Airport "disgraces," former Senator Hiram Bingham last night urged that public works funds be obtained to remove the stigma.

Speaking at a banquet of the National Aeronautic Association at the Mayflower, Bingham, president of the organization and candidate to succeed himself at today's election, asserted that the military field should be removed to the new location authorized by Congress.

The proposed consolidation of Washington and Hoover airports he outlined as another deserving project if "the appropriation by Congress of over $3,000,000,000 for public works was not merely a gesture."

Grover Loening, donor of the Intercollegiate Trophy, presented the award to Louis Carner, representing the William and Mary Flying Club. The University of Minnesota and the Harvard Flying Club were awarded second and third prizes for the activities of their flying organizations the last year.

The convention will end today with election and a business session.

The association adopted a resolution yesterday to send a message of cheer to Admiral Byrd, its vice president, who is scheduled to sail for Little America today from Norfolk. It also was voted to make a contribution to the expedition's expense fund.

NRA Considers Prison Penalty

Restaurant Case Tuesday Will Involve Possible Drastic Action.

The first case in Washington in which an employer will be recommended for a fine and prison term, in addition to removal of his blue eagle, is expected to be acted on by the District NRA compliance board at its next meeting, it was learned yesterday.

The case is that of a restaurant proprietor, who assured the board at a former hearing that he was complying with the restaurant code. Since then, according to Maj. Raymond J. Walter, liaison officer of the board, evidence has been presented by a former employe of the restaurateur charging the latter with falsifying.

The restaurateur was first summoned on a complaint that he was not paying employes. He testified the accusation was untrue.

Maj. Walter said an employe has made an affidavit that he has not been paid since the restaurateur obtained his blue eagle. If the compliance board is satisfied with this evidence, recommendation for punishment can be made immediately to the Disctrict recovery board.

In view of the severity of the case, the compliance board is expected to recommend imposition of the prison term of six months and the fine of $500, as ordered by the President for Blue Eagle law violators.

This is the third restaurateur charged with violation of NRA regulations in Washington. The two other cases are now before the recovery board and will be acted on next Tuesday. The recovery board will also act in the case of an ice cream manufacturer charged with failure to comply with the NRA code.

The golden text is from Revelation 14:13: "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth; yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labours, and their works do follow them." Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service. And be not conformed to this world, but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect, will of God." (Romans xii:1, 2.) The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science text book, "Science and Health With Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "God requires perfection, but not until the battle between Spirit and flesh is fought and the victory won. During the sensual ages, absolute Christian Science may not be achieved prior to the change called death, for we have not the power to demonstrate what we do not understand. But the human self must be evangelized. This task God demands us to accept lovingly today, and to abandon so fast as practical the material, and to work out the spiritual which determines the outward and actual."

Near East Pivotal to Peace

Earliest Christian Missionaries Began Their Work in What Now Is Turkey; Paul and Barnabas "Welcomed" With Riots; Civilization Saved.

By William T. Ellis.

Twenty years ago Turkey, as she had been for centuries, was a center of international unrest, intrigue, foreboding and war. The Near East was the world's tinderbox. It was there, at Sarajevo, that civilization was set afire in 1914. In fact, the Near East, and Asia Minor especially, always has been pivotal in world affairs. It was there the Roman Empire and western civilization were saved, after the Barbarians had overrun Rome and Europe.

In strange paradox, today it is in Turkey, which practically is conterminous with Asia Minor, that world peace and progress have their strongest citadel. Turkey is one nation that is actively pursuing peace. It has ended the centuries-old strife with Greece by a comprehensive covenant.

On the day of ratification, at Ankara, I saw Premier Venizelos and Premier Ismet Pasha kiss each other in public. Turkey also has formed a Balkan confederation to insure peace and stability. In this old Bible land a force for human welfare has arisen which puts to shame the militaristic plottings of Europe.

Grand Strategy Pointed Out.

Not all parts of the earth's surface are equally important in the progress of history. Strategic significance always has been attached to the Near East. There has not been a scheme of world conquest for 5,000 years that has not either centered in or impinged upon Bible lands. All grand strategy must reckon with the Near East.

There was real statesmanship in the Early Church at Antioch. When the momentous decision was made that Christianity should enter upon a plan of aggressive world conquest, it was to Asia Minor, with its 500 cities, that the first missionaries bent their steps. By striking at this center of civilization, the whole world would be most quickly affected.

We pause to ponder the audacity of these pioneers. They not only began the universal missionary movement of Christianity (and whenever Christianity has ceased to be missionary it has become moribund), but they also definitely set out to win the nations for Christ. Their spirit echoed in the prayer of John Knox, "O Lord, give me Scotland, or I die!" Valignani, the great Catholic missionary, confronted China, "O Rock! O Rock! When wilt thou open to my Lord!"

City Man's New Name.

In this momentous missionary movement by the Antioch Church—and it may not be overlooked that it was the Church as a body that inaugurated the enterprise—two figures were put to the fore, Barnabas and Saul. At this point in the narrative of Acts, Saul is first called by the name of Paul. Whilst he had worked among Jews, he had borne his old Hebrew name, Saul, but when he set out upon his world adventure, he came to be called by his Roman cosmopolitan name, Paul, which signifies "Little."

It means much that Paul was a city man. Jesus had been a small town man, predominantly rural in His manner of thought and figures of speech, despite His sojourns in Capernaum and Jerusalem. But His greatest apostle was city born and city bred.

His statemanship was urban. So, when he began his great missionary effort, he struck first and always at the cities. The record of Paul's life is a succession of city stories.

When something like the Antioch spirit and strategy is reborn in the present-day church, we shall see a new effort to evangelize thoroughly our great cities—to make them truly Christian in life; with cleansed politics and social habits. That great undertaking will be a more difficult task than evangelization of equatorial Africa.

NRA and Other Matters.

There is something more powerful than politics or industry or finance; that is what the plain people may be thinking in their hearts. When these first missionaries set out from Antioch to win the world, after a solemn church service of dedication, they did not carry a new system of government or of economics. They simply bore a message, told a story, shared a life.

One by one, man by man, woman by woman, child by child, they changed individual hearts. That was all. Yet that still remains forever the A B C of all reform and progress. The United States has welcomed the imposition upon the people of the machinery of the NRA. Every thoughtful person, however, recognizes that this "moratorium upon selfishness," as it has been called, can not permanently succeed unless it is supported and animated by a public spirit which may be simply described as Christian. The wheels are good, but there must be the spirit within the wheels to make them move.

All real progress in human relationships—by which inclusive term is meant everything good that civilization is trying to do—waits upon the birth of a new spirit in individuals. What Paul and Barnabas carried to Asia Minor is what the world supremely needs today.

"Welcomed" by Riots.

Problems soon arose in Paul and Barnabas' pioneerng. John Mark, their young attendant, flunked the trip. Somehow, his nerve failed him. But onward Paul and Barnabas pressed, to a welcome that usually turned into a riot. In Cyprus they had a set-to with a sorcerer named Elymas, and if anybody thinks the missionary is milk-and-water shadow of a real man, he needs but to read Paul's face-to-face words to this impostor: "O full of all subtlety and all mischief, thou child of the devil, thou enemy of all righteousness, wilt thou not cease to pervert the right ways of the Lord?"

Seeking the natural point of contact in the cities they visited, the pioneers first told their Story in the synagogues. Sometimes they were welcomed; usually they were later stoned. At Lystra they were hailed as gods—and soon afterward left for dead, when the mob was through with them.

I have visited all of the ruins of Asia Minor cities where Paul and Barnabas pioneered. It was by no means an easy trip; and few living persons have made it.

In some of these villages there are memories of modern missionaries who deserve to be bracketed with Paul. (How fortunate the American Board, to be the only missionary organization with Asia Minor for its field!) In Konia Miss Cushman during the war enacted a role which entitles her to be called the most romantic and heroic woman of that tragic era. Her story is almost as incredible as that of her apostolic predecessors from Antioch.

Just now, the cause of Christian missions is in a slump. Today is a good time to go back to Antioch, to learn anew what the Duke of Wellington called "The Church's marching orders." For to cease to be missionary is to cease to be Christian. If the New Testament is to be retained, then its Message must be proclaimed, by every means devisable, to the last man on earth.

Stocks Renew Climb on Rise In Other Marts

Russian News Also Aids Advance; Sales Up to 2,698,760 Shares.

New York, Oct. 20 (AP).—The eagerly awaited rally finally appeared in stocks today. It was fostered by a good upturn in wheat, by reports that the Government was planning action to allay agricultural unrest and by rumors that the matter of Russian recognition had attained more definite status.

Net gains of 1 to 4 points were a pleasant reversal of the market's dominant trend this week.

Undoubtedly prices had slid to a level that offered appeal to traders willing to play for a turn on the long side; also it seemed reasonable to assume that a recently explained short interest was willing to cover, for when grains rallied stocks followed after bobbing up and down erratically in the forenoon.

Reports on Russia.

Reports bearing on Russia heard during market hours apparently encouraged some speculative buying in shares of companies which might be expected to profit by broader trade relations with the Soviets, such as the machinery manufacturers.

It developed after the close that Russia had accepted an American invitation for "frank and friendly conversations" in exploration of "all questions outstanding" between Russia and the United States. It was inferred in some quarters that this might prove to be an important first step toward eventual recognition.

The rediscount rate cut here appeared to have little effect on stocks, partly because such action had long been anticipated and partly because credit expansion is hardly a new angle of the recovery program. Call money eased slightly in the unofficial quotations; the stock exchange held at ¾ of 1 per cent.

Stocks Helped by Loadings.

Rail stocks were helped in their recovery by word that loadings last week, 664,058 cars, were well above a year ago when the 1932 high had been made. The total also was not far under this year's peak of 666,000 cars for the week ended September 2. New York Central, Santa Fe, Illinois Central, Baltimore & Ohio, Southern Pacific and Pennsylvania were up 1 to 2 points; Union Pacific rallied 4.

In U. S. Steel, American Telephone, Westinghouse, Du Pont, Kennecott, Anaconda, Sears Roebuck, Consolidated Gas, Dome Mines, Western Union, Bethlehem and American Can the improvement also ranged from 1 to 2. Case closed more than 3 higher, while Chrysler, strong all day in reflection of its third quarter showing, was up almost 3. Seaboard Oil also was strong, but Standard of California reacted, doubtless because of the abandonment of the proposed merger with New Jersey Standard. Sales of stock totaled 2,698,760 shares.

Foreign exchange dealings had as their feature another dip in French francs; other European gold moneys declined sympathetically, which meant a good gain for the dollar. No new influences were discernible in the international monetary situation.

Change of Policy Indicated

Appears Open Market Purchases Will Depend on Market Needs.

By Ralph West Robey.

Federal Reserve policies recently have played such a small part in the credit expansion program of the Administration that the current reduction of the rediscount rate of the New York bank is being widely interpreted as of only small moment—as just a belated step to bring the rediscount rate more closely in line with money market conditions. Actually, for we know officially, this may be the case. It appears more probable to me, however, that this reduction marks a fundamental change in the credit policies of the Reserve System and a change which may have far-reaching consequences in the future activities of the Administration.

To appraise this point of view, it is desirable to recall that ordinarily there is a more or less direct connection between the rediscount rate and the lending policies of commercial banks. This relationship grows out of the fact that through rediscounting at the reserve institutions the commercial banks are enabled to increase their lending power, or, in more technical terms, their legal reserves. In consequence, if the rediscount rate is low, they are inclined to borrow in order to make more loans to their customers, and thereby enhance their profits. Conversely, if the rediscount rate is high they tend to refrain from borrowing from the Reserve banks and consequently lend less freely to their own customers. If the reserve authorities want the commercial banks to lend more freely, accordingly, they reduce their rediscount rate, and if they think too many loans are being made, they raise the rate.

Banks Must Be Loaned-Up For Rate to Be Effective.

It is obvious, of course, that a prerequisite for getting such effects from changes in the rediscount rate is that the commercial banks have no surplus-lending power. In other words, to use bank jargon, they must be "loaned-up," or in a position where any increase in the volume of their loans will necessitate rediscounting, or otherwise increasing their balances, with the reserve banks. If they are not in this position, they will, in so far as possible, increase their loans, regardless of rediscount rates, in an attempt to make the maximum profits from the funds in their possession.

From this it follows that if the reserve banks can create excess reserves for the commercial banks, it presumably will have the result of getting the latter to lend more freely. It is upon this hypothesis that the recent open-market operations of our reserve system have been conducted. Through this means the central institutions, in effect, have bought Government obligations from the commercial banks and paid for them by crediting the accounts of the banks on the books of the reserve institutions. The result has been that today our commercial banks have approximately $800,000,000 of excess reserves, all of which they would use several times over in making loans if they could find good borrowers.

Banks Have Found it Impossible to Use the Funds.

Unfortunately, however, they are unable to find such borrowers. Accordingly, continuation of the open-market operations of the reserve banks merely would have the effect of piling up more and more unused, and unusable, funds in the commercial banks. From this point of view, therefore, it is futile to go ahead buying at a set rate each week. If the banks do not increase their loans with excess reserves of $800,000,000 they will not increase them with excess reserves of $1,000,000,000.

At the same time, it is important to keep from giving the impression that there is to be any letting up on the easy-money policy. The reduction of the rediscount rate serves this purpose. It shows clearly that a reduction in the open-market operations of the reserve banks does not mean that there is any less desire on their part to have loans made.

Having shown this, it, then, is possible to determine the volume of such open-market operations on the basis of other considerations. These other considerations are the needs of the market, especially the market for Government bonds. It seems to me, therefore, that the significance of the rediscount rate reduction is simply that henceforth the reserve system's open-market operations will be in whatever volume is necessary to assure a good market for Government obligations. This in turn means that the Government can go ahead with its spending operations without fear of finding it impossible to sell its obligations.

Foreign Markets.

(Associated Press.)

London—Trading on the stock exchange was extremely quiet today. Prices were inclined to droop during most of the session until better Paris and Wall street reports helped quotations recover from their lowest levels in many instances. The market closed quiet.

Paris—Quotations on the bourse again turned upward despite the weakness in French rentes. The closing was firm.

Berlin—Business on the boerse was dull and quotations were weaker with the slight improvement in prices that occurred being unsustained. The closing was generally below yesterday's quotations.

Bond Market Is Unchanged; At 75 Level

Russian News Fails to Aid Prices; Sales Drop to $9,645,000.

New York, Oct. 20 (AP). — Bonds shuffled about nervously today, declining and recovering spasmodically and finishing with losses and gains about even.

Traders in the more speculative issues were torn between optimism developed by the rally in stocks and commodities and doubt resulting from another slump of European gold currencies in terms of the dollar. Reports of American negotiations with Russia looking toward early recognition of the Soviets apparently had little effect on prices generally.

The market's activity was slightly less than that of yesterday, sales totaling $9,645,000, par value.

Rails that closed fractionally to around a point higher included some maturities of Allegheny Corporation, Santa Fe, Baltimore & Ohio, Canadian Pacific, Chesapeake Corporation, St. Paul, Chicago & North Western, Erie, Northern Pacific, Pennsylvania, Southern and Chesapeake & Ohio. Among losers in this group were liens of Frisco, Union Pacific, Southern Pacific, Nickel Plate, New York Central, Missouri Pacific, Louisville & Nashville, Illinois Central, Great Northern and Rock Island.

Modest advances were held by loans of American Sugar Refining, American Telephone, Atlantic Refining, Hudson Coal, International Telephone, Pacific Gas, Pacific Telephone, Utilities Power & Light and Warner Brothers.

While Liberty fourth 4¼s, both the called and uncalled series, eased, most of the Treasuries were slightly higher. The reduction of the Federal Reserve discount rate from 2½ to 2 per cent seemingly was no great stimulant to the Government list.

Foreign obligations were dull and irregular. French bonds lost 2 or more points as the franc declined. Dutch East Indies issues were down 3 to around 8 on a few sales, and loans of Poland, Switzerland and Cuba were 1 to 2. The Argentines improved.

Procter & Gamble reported net earnings of $4,383,840 for the first fiscal quarter ended September 30, equal to slightly over 64 cents a common share. The company said this was an increase of $645,258 over the preceding quarter.

Net income of Continental Baking Corporation and subsidiaries for the thirteen weeks ended September 30 amounted to $1,019,201, compared with $657,844 for the thirteen weeks ended September 17, 1932. For the 39 weeks ended September 30 net income was $2,145,873, against $2,132,585 for the like period ended September 17, 1932.

Underwood Elliott Fisher Co. and consolidated subsidiaries report for the September 30 quarter net profit of $539,954, equal after preferred dividend requirements to 73 cents a share on the common stock. This compares with net profit of $167,719, or 18 cents a share, in the June quarter and net loss of $305,812 in the September quarter last year.

Chicago, Oct. 20.—Container Corporation of America reports net income of $290,958 for the third quarter and of $50,781 for the nine months ended September 30, 1933, after deduction of selling and administrative expense, interest, depreciation, Federal taxes and adequate reserve for year-end adjustments and before profit on purchase of bonds and debentures. Toledo, Ohio, Oct. 20 (AP).—Gains in the flat-glass industry in recent months were reflected in the announcement today that net earnings of the Libbey-Owens-Ford Glass Co., for the third quarter were $1,526,934.92, bringing earnings for nine months of 1933 up to $3,684,018.41.

In the third quarter last year there was a loss of $487,037 and the loss for the comparable nine months period last year was $438,907.

Five Leading Japanese Milk Companies Merge

With the object in view of effectively controlling domestic price and distribution, the five largest Japanese producers of condensed milk have recently combined, a report to the Commerce Department from its Tokyo office reveals. The firms involved in the merger, it is pointed out, account for more than 80 per cent of condensed milk output of Japan.

Expansion in production of condensed and evaporated milk in Japan has been the chief factor in the marked curtailment of Japanese imports of such products. Receipts of these items in the first eight months of the current year were less than one-third of those of the corresponding period of 1932.

Trade Trends.

(Associated Press.)

Men's clothing—Trade authorities report that interest in the market has quieted down. It is said that retailers generally are well stocked for nearby needs, and that orders are being held to numbers required to complete some of the best moving lines.

Jewelry—Current sales are running at levels which compare favorably with a year ago, and the trade is said to be looking for the best holiday season in years.

Dried fruits—Markets have been less active this month, but prices continue firm, according to dealers. In a few items the price situation is tight because of a shortage of spot supplies.

Lead—Despite the drop of $10 a ton within a week, one of the sharpest declines in recent years, consumers show no keen desire to enter the market except on a small scale, according to trade interests.

Textiles—"The rayon fabric market," says the current letter of Scheuer & Co., cloth brokers, "resembles in every particular the situation in cotton. Second-hand offerings are large and prices reactionary. Mills are still producing on a liberal scale. In the main their products are well sold ahead for the balance of the year, but actually they are sold only on paper."

Danville Tobacco Sales Total 281,009 Pounds

Danville, Va., Oct. 20 (AP).—Sales were light on the Danville tobacco market when 281,009 pounds were disposed of for $35,558.09, the average price per 100 pounds being $12.65.

Common and medium grades predominated the market, and the average dropped. The average at Tuesday's opening sale was $13.52, and on Wednesday was $12.93. Tobacco men said they expect the average to rise at the first of next week, when a heavy sale is expected.

At the close of the corresponding week a year ago, the same 50 stocks had a market value of $9,556,899,375, indicating an increase during the year of $3,011,905,125, or 31.52 per cent.

Chicago, Oct. 20.—Twenty-five representative stocks listed on the Chicago Stock Exchange had a market value at the close of business for the week ended October 14 of $473,110,711, a decrease of $11,148,026, or 2.30 per cent, as compared with the market value of $484,258,737 at the close of the previous week, according to a compilation by Paul H. Davis & Co., members of the Chicago Stock Exchange.

At the close of the corresponding week a year ago the same 25 stocks had a market value of $487,948,013, indicating a decrease during the year of $14,837,302, or 3.04 per cent.

Curb Battles To Recapture Lost Ground

Market Closes Spotty; Metals Gain; Sales 375,000 Shares.

New York, Oct. 20 (AP).—The curb list today made a modest attempt to regain some of the ground lost in recent heavy selling, but closing results were spotty.

Metals were notably firm, New Jersey Zinc and Newmont closing 3 and 4 points higher, respectively. Alcohols, on the other hand, continued to lag and, with the exception of National Distillers new closed generally fractions lower.

Public utility shares were improved fractions to a point or so, Electric Bond & Share gaining 1½. Oils recorded extremely narrow changes.

Aluminum Co. of America, recently a heavy loser, got back 3 points. Technicolor continued in demand, gaining a point in active dealings. Pittsburgh & Lake Erie topped 11 points in a small transfer.

Sales approximated 375,000 shares, compared with 406,000 for yesterday.

United States' Sales to Chile Taking Lead

Santiago, Chile, Oct. 20 (AP).—Uncle Sam was the world's best salesman in Chile the first eight months of this year.

But, while the United States again led with 22 per cent of the Nation's imports, there were surprising changes among other nations, government figures showed today.

Peru, with 16 per cent, for example, jumped into second place, compared with fourth at 12 per cent for last year.

Meanwhile, the British Isles clung to third place with 13 per cent, compared to 15 in 1932.

Argentina went into fourth place with 12 per cent, as against seventh place in 1932 at 2 per cent.

It was a bad eight months for Germany, as imports from that nation—second through last year—dropped to fifth place with 11 per cent.

France had 6 per cent, with Brazil, Belgium, Italy, the Netherlands and Sweden together at 2.

Chile's exports likewise underwent a number of changes, the figures disclosed.

The United States, with 19 per cent, was displaced as Chile's best customer, dropped to second place as the British Isles grabbed first by taking 28 per cent of Chile's exports.

Last year, the United States took 29 per cent, the British Isles 27.

Peach Tree Bearing Two Crops Is Perfected

Holliday, Utah, Oct. 20 (U.P.).—Constant study of budding peach trees has resulted in success for S. A. Rice, Holliday farmer, who discovered a specie that will bear two distinct crops yearly.

Fenced in his unique orchard, Rice has a collection of more than 1,000 small trees. Each spring, he said, the trees blossom, and a few weeks later the crop is completely matured. Then shortly afterward they again produce prize fruit. The first crop is usually larger than the second.

Cotton Advance Is Reduced to Small Gains

December Closes at 9.22 as General Market Rises 5 to 8 Points.

New York, Oct. 20 (AP).—Cotton advanced and retreated today. Early irregularity was followed by sharp advances on buying promoted by a firmer tone in the wheat and stock markets and expectations of a "stimulating" statement concerning Russian relations.

After selling up from 9.12 to 9.42 for December, however, the market met realizing on Southern selling and lost a good part of the advance. With December closing at 9.22, the market ended steady at net gains of 5 to 8 points.

Early buying was based on reports that the holding movement was becoming tighter in some parts of the South. There seemed to be very little Southern selling or hedging here after the first half hour, and buying became more active during the afternoon.

Active Months Gain.

Active months sold 25 to 35 points above yesterday's closing quotations, with May advancing to 9.75, but the demand tapered off somewhat at these figures, and there were reactions later under realizing, or a renewal of liquidation and somewhat increased hedging from the South.

There was considerable liquidation of December during the earlier trading, but it appeared to be quite readily absorbed by the trade, presumably against sales of later delivveries. Houses with Liverpool connections were said to be buying here during the morning against sales in the English market.

Exports today, 34,337 bales, making 1,960,878 so far this season. Port receipts, 75,397. United States port stocks, 3,860,350.

Cedar Rust Eradication In Apple Trees Urged

Winchester, Va., Oct. 20 (Spl.).—Complete eradication of cedar rust in Frederick County, if the commercial apple growers desire their fruit to have the quality necessary for foreign markets, was advocated today by W. S. Hough, entomologist, at the Winchester Research Laboratory.

One very important cause of such poor foliage on apple trees in 1933 was cedar rust, Mr. Hough stated.

C. & P. Telephone Plant Expending $150,000

Richmond, Va., Oct. 20 (AP). Charles H. Weber, general manager of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. of Virginia, says that construction projects, including improvements to the pole line and wire system of the company, involving an expenditure of $150,000, are now in progress.

Japan Leading World Trade, Survey Shows

London, Oct. 20 (U.P.).—Japan led the world in trade expansion for the first six months of 1933, an official survey by the British Board of Trade showed today.

The survey gave statistics showing that Japan's exports increased at the startling rate of 55.3 per cent compared with the first six months of 1932.

A decline of 19.9 per cent in the United States' foreign trade for the same period, compared with the year previous, was noted.

The survey showed slight increases for Denmark, Australia, Sweden, India and British Malaya. None of these exceeded 5 per cent.

Declines were registered by Czechoslovakia, 28.8 per cent; and Germany, 40.4 per cent, the figures showed.

Wall Street Expects Money To Start Return From Europe

New York, Oct. 20 (AP).—Indications of a shift in the flow in international money movements back in the direction of the United States have been seen this week by some Wall street bankers.

The amount of fugitive American capital that has departed in the past year or so has been estimated from $500,000,000 to $1,000,000,000, and the amount of withdrawals of foreign investments in dollar securities are also estimated at huge figures.

With the European situation now confused, however, by the withdrawal of Germany from the Disarmament Conference, and by the problem faced by France in her huge deficit, dollars seem to be regarded with a little more favor.

This was preceded by the indications of sound-money leanings in Washington, although most quarters doubt that any immediate dollar stabilization is feasible.

This week has seen some rather substantial transfers of funds from France to America, according to well-informed bankers, and some renewed buying of American securities for foreign account. Some continentals are said to have manifested a renewed interest in gold stocks here, which might indicate a desires to hedge against inflation in their own countries.

Indications of strong opposition in the French Chamber to Premier Daladier's plan to balance the budget, holding the threat of a fall of the Daladier cabinet, are being watched closely for a clew as to the course of the French franc.

U. S. Imports Of Seaweed Higher in 1933

Imports of the seaweed known as agar-agar into the United States during the first half of 1933 were the highest of any half-year period in the last five years, according to the Commerce Department's Chemical Division.

Total receipts in the first six months of the current year were 445,000 pounds, compared with 479,000 pounds in the full year 1932. Average monthly imports in the 1933 period amounted to 74,000 pounds, against 40,000 pounds in 1932.

The declared value of agar-agar imports has declined steadily since 1929, amounting to approximately 23 cents a pound in the 1933 period, compared with 77 cents four years ago.

Virginia Apple Packing Plants to Close Earlier

Harrisonburg, Va., Oct. 20 (Spl.). Apple-packing plants in Rockingham will close down weeks earlier this year because of the scarcity of No. 1 grade apples. There is a brisk demand for cull and cider apples, which are bringing the highest prices in years.

One West Rockingham packing firm, reporting the shortest crop in a decade, will close next week. Normally, the packing season runs through November.

Iowa Farmers Try Raising Two New Crops

West Liberty, Iowa, Oct. 20 (AP).—While other amateur gardeners fussed with prosaic potatoes and tomatoes, J. L. Roman and C. A. Peters branched into new fields.

Roman successfully harvested a crop of coffee berries and Peters a fine crop of choice-leaf tobacco. Both are ordinarily grown in semi-tropical regions.

Wheat Jumps Again on Wave Of Purchasing

U. S. Buying and Farmers' Aid Plans Force All Grains Upward.

Chicago, Oct. 20 (AP).—Extensive wheat purchasing for United States Government account, and reports of intended broad measures to alleviate farming communities' apprehension, helped rush grain prices upward today.

In a sudden late wave of buying, wheat, corn, oats and rye all bounded to the utmost limit allowed during any one day, wheat and rye up 5 cents a bushel, corn 4 cents and oats 3 cents, but big profit-taking sales led to violent reactions from the top.

Trade advices out of Washington said the administration was working on plans to distribute approximately $70,000,000 to wheat farmers participating in production control, and that loans to be extended on wheat would be similar to those on cotton.

Foreign Wheat News.

Simultaneous with price jumps were intimations of radically unfavorable crop developments in Argentina, big export business in Canada and of steps toward diplomatic recognition of Russia by the United States.

Wheat closed flurried, 2 to 4⅛ cents above yesterday's finish; corn, ⅞ to 1½ up; oats, 1½ to 2¼ advance, and provisions varying from 2 cents decline to a rise of 10 cents.

One of the many stimulating factors was a report that President Roosevelt had been asked to fix a price of $1.28 for July wheat on the grain exchanges. Another was an Argentine cable telling of 100 degrees temperatures in important wheat areas where prolonged drought threatened severe crop deterioration.

Dryness in U. S.

In addition were advices of persistent dryness in United States winter wheat districts southwest, causing delay to seeding and to plant development as well.

Preceding the sharp upturns of grain prices, however, were material transient setbacks which resulted from lower wheat quotations at Liverpool and from early weakness of securities at New York. The action of the Liverpool wheat market was attributed to enlarged estimates of the Australian crop and to pressure of European wheat. The probable outturn of wheat in Australia this season was unofficially estimated at 165,000,000 bushels, compared with recent forecasts of 152,000,000 bushels.

Corn and oats rallied with wheat. Besides, the weather outlook was considered unfavorable for corn crop movement. Provisions were swayed mainly by the action of grains.

$110,805,109 Oil Benefits Laid to NRA

Capital invested in oil has received a return of $67,805,109 and labor a return of $43,000,000 as a direct result of the operation of the NRA code in petroleum industry during the approximately 43 days the code has been in effect, according to the T. S. Hose review, which also points to the fact that, contrary to seasonal influences, gasoline consumption increased 4 per cent in September over August due to the shorter working hours under the NRA.

The unusual benefits derived by the oil industry alone from the administration plan, it is said, justify the prediction that the NRA will correspondingly help all industry if it is properly applied.

"Because of the nature of the oil industry," says the review, "figures may be obtained more quickly than would be possible in almost any other, and we now have before us the actual conditions that exist relative to petroleum under the code compared with the conditions before it was put into operation.

"Price increases in crude oil have amounted to an average of 35 cents a barrel, and as the creation of new dollars is the vehicle on which this country will again ride to prosperity, this is of vital interest. This advance has meant the creation of 876,863 new dollars each day.

"Approximately 109,608 of these dollars have been put out for royalty oil subject to no overhead whatever—100 per cent spending power. Refiners have received since the code went into effect over 700,000 additional dollars each day, and labor has received nearly 1,000,000 additional dollars for a similar period. The exact number of men put to work under the code is not available, but is in the neighborhood of 300,000. The total net results of the code are $1,576,863 a day to the producer, the royalty owner the refiner, and $1,000,000 a day more to labor during the 43 days the code has been in effect.

"Contrary to seasonal demand, the consumption of gasoline increased, according to reliable estimates, approximately 4 per cent in September over August, which naturally should have been the month of greatest consumption. This September increase is due to the shorter working hours under the NRA, thus giving more time to recreation.

Buying of Wool Goods Is Decreased in Week

New York, Oct. 20.—Further seasonal slackening in the pace of wool goods buying was noted during the week, according to the New York Wool Top Exchange Service, as buyers completed their selections of men's wear fabrics for spring. Some mills are sold up for weeks ahead, while others report that they are not sufficiently well booked to sustain operations on a double-shift basis.

Machinery activity on the whole is somewhat less than at this time last month due to the slump in sales of women's wear.

Wool Markets.

Boston, Oct. 20 (A.P.) (U. S. Department of Agriculture).—Very little business is being transacted in the wool market. Nevertheless, the price situation appears mostly quite firm. The only weakness noticed recently has been on some specially secured woolen wools, prices of which on account of scarcity had been advanced decidedly out of line with prices of other wools in the heavy September trading. Greasy combing wools suitable for worsted manufacture are being firmly held and small quantities are moved at prices fully up to recent selling quotations.

The Commercial Bulletin will say tomorrow: "Demand for wool has been at low ebb this week. Occasional sales are reported, but they have been invariably of small quantities. Manufacturers continue to consume heavy quantities of wool, but consumption is gradually lessening, in line with general expectations. The trade naturally has come to pause pending a determination of the strength of the buying movement on fall and winter clothing.

"Foreign markets are all ruling strong and healthy and prospects of lower prices for wool in the foreign primary markets look, at the moment, rather remote.

"Demand for fall Texas wools has been less eager and the few cars of lots which have been sold recently have been in the general range of 25@27½ cents, in Texas.

"Mohair continues slow. Stocks on spot are rather small. Some sizable importations of foreign hair are being made."

Current Programs in the Picture Houses as Reviewers Caught Them Yesterday

Mystery Story By Van Dine a Puzzle at Met

"Kennel Case" Adheres to Book; Other Bills Offer Variety.

"THE KENNEL MURDER CASE." Warner Brothers picturization of the novel by S. S. Van Dine, adapted to the screen by Robert Lee and Peter Milne, starring William Powell, with Mary Astor, Helen Vinson, Eugene Pallette, Ralph Morgan, Robert Barratt, Robert McWade, Arthur Hohl, Paul Cavanaugh and Jack La Rue. Directed by Michael Curtis. Reviewed Friday afternoon.

Embellishing the solution of stark and gaunt murder with the divergent enterprises of the dilettante and the dog fancier, S. S. Van Dine in his story of "The Kennel Murder Case" concocted a homicidal mystery whose problems were cleverly obscured beneath the competition of blue ribbon Scotties and the avarice of those who dabble in priceless ceramics as an avocation.

It might be suspected by those who have read the book that it would be a matter of some difficulty to translate its suspense, its misleading clues and its abstruse employment of the perfected devices of intellectual criminals to the screen without some loss of their effectiveness as it was exerted in the novel. Such, happily for those who find their pleasure in ambulance chasing and the ominous spectre of death, in this instance proves not to be the case.

"The Kennel Murder Case," as it unfolds itself at the Metropolitan, is as baffling a police puzzle as one could wish to tackle. It follows the printed narrative with unusual fidelity, even daring to venture into the acutely specialized fad of collecting Chinese porcelains and the no less intricate hobby of judging Scotch terriers at Long Island bench shows and eventually summarizing all of the evidence—in Mr. Van Dine's habitually complete and painstaking manner—making all the possible deductions and then confessing them all apparently wrong and starting over again, with the culprit practically in Philo Vance's retributive clutches at the very moment.

This, of course, all makes for fascinating and feverish entertainment. One becomes, for the length of the picture, a private detective engaged in a challenging and exciting manhunt. And in the end, one finds oneself a thousands miles off the track, which only increases respect for the amazing acumen of Mr. Vance and the superiority of his reasoning over that of District Attorney Markham and that eminent bonehead, Sergt. Heath.

Almost the entire effect of this sort of thing, naturally, depends upon the skill of those in the pivotal roles and their ability to lend events a degree of authenticity by the earnestness and sincerity of their own efforts. "The Kennel Murder Case" is in no wise deficient in this regard.

Returning to the depiction of a character in which he has excelled on previous occasions, William Powell again is the polished and suave Philo Vance, the modern reincarnation of the Sherlock Holmes of a generation or two ago. He plays the part incisively but not arrogantly. Similarly, Eugene Pallette again lends his clumsy humor to the everlasting glory of Sergt. Heath, the second-guesser, who always is on hand to take full credit for what he didn't do. Robert McWade is Markham, and a long list of others are present in the cast to assume the roles of lovers, sweethearts, collectors, dog fanciers, officers of the law, suspects and innocent bystanders.

Among these, Mary Astor and Helen Vinson provide the feminine interest; Ralph Morgan, Paul Cavanaugh, Arthur Hohl, Frank Conroy, Jack La Rue and James Lee, a considerable tentative rogues gallery. An unnamed Scottie and a fine Dobermann-Pinscher participate importantly in the unraveling of a double murder, the smashing of a valuable vase and the wounding of two blooded dogs.

Michael Curtiz has directed the picture with a keen eye to preserving the elements of both surprise and suspense without sacrificing any of the mystery's legitimately comic possibilities.

The supporting program of short subjects is one of unusual merit. Ethel Waters, supported by a numerous company of her own race, appears in a plaintive Vitaphone musical fantasy, "Rufus Jones for President," during which she sings "Am I Blue" and "Underneath the Harlem Moon" as only she is able to sing them. A Betty Boop cartoon comedy, "Morning, Noon and Night," with the basic melody played by Rubinoff and his orchestra, famous on the air, is among the best of its kind and the Paramount Sound News and Universal's NRA comedy in miniature, "The Eagle and the Squawk," with Louise Fazenda and Andy Devine, complete a high-voltage program for those with deductive instinct or Hawkshaw aspirations.

"BEAUTY FOR SALE." M-G-M's picturization of Faith Baldwin's novel, "Beauty," adapted to the screen by Zelda Sears and Eve Greene, featuring Madge Evans, Alice Brady, Una Merkel, Otto Kruger and Florine McKinney. Directed by Richard Boleslavsky. Reviewed Friday night.

The beauty for sale here is three little maids employed in the disillusioning school conducted by Mme. Sonya, an "exclusive" New York beauty shoppe, where as many millionaires-without-marriage are to be found as at any stage door.

The trio of beauties are Carol (Una Merkel), cynical and flippant, out to get all she can from "Daddy" and reaping a trip to Europe, a mink coat and finally a surprising wedding ring; Jane (Florine McKinney), loving not wisely but too well and finding suicide the only way out; and, most important for this particular story's sake, Letty (Madge Evans), who loves and is loved sincerely by Mark Sherwood, married to an apparently undivorceable wife.

These three with their three angles on one problem make a play with nothing unusual certainly, nothing in the least new, nothing even slightly memorable, but their good acting, the speedy direction of Richard Boleslavsky, and breezy and very amusing dialogue make it zip along to a rather steady accompaniment of laughs, a more entertaining picture than might be expected.

All three girls do nice work, particularly Florine McKinney. Otto Kruger, with his splendid voice, quiet charm and sureness of touch, is perfect as Sherwood, while Alice Brady, very shruggy and eccentric as Mrs. Sherwood, much in the manner of her lamentable Bridgie of "When Ladies Meet," still manages, somehow, to get away with it this time in good style and to be as amusing as she is unreal.

The picture especially pleased us because it is practically the first to afford that ingratiating juvenile, Eddie Nugent, anything remotely resembling a chance. He takes it in the form of an annoying but sympathetic, persistent suitor of Letty's and makes the most of it. May Robson and Isobell Jewell, the haughty desk girl at Mme. Sonya's, do very well, indeed, with their brief moments.

Dancing and, unfortunately, a master of ceremonies predominate in the stage show. We say "unfortunately" advisedly because Bob Murphy lets his soiled and suggestive quips fall where they may not only in front of his audience, but in front of his young son and daughter, and then—strangely sings that horribly sobby saga of paternal love, "Shake Hands With a Millionaire." The son by the way performs nicely, piano playing, singing and hinting that he might be able to dance also.

Of the dancers, Enrica and Novello will be liked very, very much. They glide so smoothly, so gently, that they hardly seem to touch the stage. The Chester Hale girls have three routines, beautifully costumed and drilled; but the last, intended to be extremely spectacular, is practically destroyed by a shimmery backdrop against which the even shimmerier costumes are almost invisible.

Edwin C. Hill, radio news commentator, presents his "act" just as though he were in his more familiar radio station.

A newsreel completes the bill unless we were unfortunate enough to pick a show omitting a Lampkin overture.

"GOLDEN HARVEST." Paramount picturization of a story by Nine Wilcox Putnam, featuring Richard Arlen, Chester Morris, Genevieve Tobin and Julia Hayden. Directed by Ralph Murphy. Reviewed Friday afternoon.

Combining the drama, the humor and even the tragedy of large-scale wheat growing and trading, "Golden Harvest" makes a noteworthy contribution to the cinema's efforts to depict the plight of the American farmer.

A picture without a villain, "Golden Harvest," visualizes a homely, realistic tale of the American farmer faced with the prospects of 50-cent wheat. One of the Martin boys has stayed on the farm, the other has gone to Chicago to make his fortune in the grain pit. Both succeed as long as the price of the crop stays up, but as it drops, Walter, at home, associated with friends in a similar fix, decides to take matters into his own hands and foments a farmers' strike.

But, to be successful, it demands a representative on the Board of Trade, and, of course, Brother Chris is the one. The farmers strike, the price of wheat skyrockets and all goes well until the following spring, when all sons of the soil, regardless of station, itch (and finally succumb) to follow the plow and set a new crop to growing. The price-raising plan consequently fails and Chris loses all but his shirt in the deal. At this point the United States Government launches its farmers' program and a new day dawns for all.

While, perhaps, a trifle idealistic in the face of current events, "Golden Harvest" presents with new force the real problems of the American wheat farmer, both from the standpoint of the actual raising of the crop and its marketing. It does not preach, neither does it attempt to solve the farmers' difficulties. Rather does the picture, with a cast well chosen for the several roles, merely present the problem plainly and forcefully.

Chester Morris and Richard Arlen are the brothers, broker and farmer, with Genevieve Tobin and Julia Hayden playing, respectively, their wives. Rosco Ates and Elizabeth Patterson furnish the comedy, as the housefolk of the paternal menage. Others in the cast include Burton Churchill, Charles Sellon, Frederick Burton, Lawrence Gray, Richard Carle and Henry Kolker.

Nothing especial need be said of these people, for they all are eminently suited to their individual parts.

On the stage, it is overwhelmingly Gracie Barrie's week, notwithstanding an array of talent that sets a new high for vaudeville. Never in better voice, yet with a tinge of sadness, Miss Barrie sings, in a full-stage set: "That's How Rhythm Was Born," "It's the Talk of the Town," "I Couldn't Tell Them What to Do," "Don't Blame Me," "It's Not a Secret Any More," "Hold Your Man," "I Just Couldn't Say Good-By," and "Let's Call It a Day."

Of the week's new acts, Ruth Miles and Eddie Kover, and their ballet of five, offer an adagio routine that is novel, impressive and artistic. The Five Wonder Girls present a series of acrobatic routines that are excellent, but which is topped by Elaine Dowling's solo contortionist number.

Ray Saxe lives up to his last name with his saxophone tooting and clever tap dancing. "Senator" Murphy, "the man of the hour," dissertates on current events, with his nonsense decidedly accented on the second syllable!

Excerpts from "Rio Rita" are played as an overture, under the direction of Charles Frederick Clark. The supplementaries include a better-than-average Merrie Melody, "I've Got to Sing a Torch Song;" Screen Souvenirs, the Universal News and Universal's NRA featurette, "The Eagle and the Squawk."

Columbia.

"NIGHT FLIGHT." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of a story by Antoine de Saint Exupery, adapted to the screen by Oliver H. P. Garrett, starring Helen Hayes, John and Lionel Barrymore, Clark Gable, Robert Montgomery and Myrna Loy. Directed by Clarence Brown. Return engagement, reviewed Friday.

Despite the wealth of melodramatic romance inherent in the events upon which this tumultuous picture is founded, and despite the long list of stars with which its action is crowded, "Night Flight" falls something short of the possibilities the subject of the night flying of the mails across the Andes in South America would seem to offer.

The stellar performances, instead of being closely knit into a highly dramatic and absorbing continuity are rather in the nature of solo efforts that permit each of the distinguished luminaries to shine individually, from time to time, without regard to any of the others. The most telling scene in the entire film—and it is a subject of impressive footage—is that between Helen Hayes and John Barrymore, as wife and manager of one of the airmen, whose plane never gets through a raging hurricane. Here is a brief touch of the sort of drama in which "Night Flight" ought to abound—but doesn't.

The storm effects have been cleverly and thrillingly contrived by Clarence Brown, the director, and there is about the film something of the adventure that attended all of the pioneering in aviation. Coming at this late date, however, it is all a trifle anticlimatic.

"Night Flight" is supplemented upon this, its second engagement on F street, by the same short-reel sound offerings that attended its showing at the Palace. Foremost among these is the Charley Chase comedy, "Sherman Said It," probably as amusing as anything this amiable buffoon has done recently. Pete Smith continues to have fun of an ornithological sort in his running comment on "Fine Feathers," and the Paramount Sound News completes the bill.

Palace

"THE BOWERY." Twentieth Century picturization of a story by Michael L. Simmons and Bessie R. Solomon, featuring Wallace Beery, Jackie Cooper and George Raft, with Fay Wray, Pert Kelton, George Walsh and Tammany Young. Directed by Raoul Walsh. Reviewed Friday, second week.

Where but in the Bowery of the "Gay Nineties" could one find a Chuck Conners, a Steve Brodie, a Swipes, all in a setting perhaps as seamy as is known in this country yet, withal, peopled with a generally happy folk whose wants are few and easily met? Not even a Dickens painted such a scene! His was a sordid, gloomy, sad canvas; but the Bowery . . . ah, the Bowery—there, despite its rags, its dirt, its gloom, was a certain degree of levity, a freedom of spirit that seemed to make even the bitterest of foes friendly enemies.

Wallace Beery, as Conners; George Raft, as Brodie, and Jackie Cooper, as Swipes, have the principal parts in this film called "The Bowery," with Fay Wray, Pert Kelton, George Walsh and Tammany Young "among those present."

Most unusual in "The Bowery" is the blissful disregard for complete authenticity of historic detail. Frequently anachronisms glare forth brighter than a pale face's rum blossom, but here—oh, well, in this exhibition of tempus redivivus it does not matter: it's atmosphere that makes the show, and what a show!

It is only because if its shortness that Walt Disney's "Three Little Pigs" must be relegated to a minor position, for in composition and dramatic value the pink porkers have feature-picture rating. "Hello, Pop" presents Ted Healy and his gang of stooges in a seemingly interminable revuelet done in Technicolor. A release of the Metrotone News is the fourth attraction on the bill.

RKO-Keith's

"ANN VICKERS." RKO-RADIO picturization of the novel by Sinclair Lewis, starring Irene Dunn, with Walter Huston, Edna May Oliver, Conrad Nagel, Bruce Cabot and Sam Hardy. Directed by John Cromwell. Reviewed Friday, second week.

"Ann Vickers" is better than average screen fare, though, in all fairness to those who have read the book and to the author himself, it must be added that the deftly sarcastic and ironic touch of the Lewis hand is nowhere visible.

Whether Mr. Lewis wrote this as a character sketch of a type of woman or as an indictment of the present-day penal system can not be said; but this is certain, the screened story of Ann Vickers is resolved into a somewhat traditional story of quasi-illicit love and prison reformation.

In the title role, Irene Dunn is hardly more than merely satisfactory, alternating her exquisite femininity with an obviously "put on" sternness as a penologist, who neither makes the role itself convincing nor enhances what is revealed as Ann's own charming personality.

Although Miss Dunn does have the principal role, it is Edna May Oliver who, by some, will be longer remembered. Miss Oliver, as Malvina, represents the old school gone modern.

Too, grateful thanks will be offered the producers for presenting Conrad Nagel in another of his excellently acted, though inconsequential, parts. Others participating are Walter Huston, as the judge whose private finances lead to his judicial downfall; Bruce Cabot, Sam Hardy, Murray Kinnell, Mitchell Lewis, Rafaelo Ottiano and Helyn Eby-Rock.

The oft repeated, but ever interesting, pastime of big game fishing is shown in "Hook and Line," enlivened by Pete Smith's pungent remarks. Ruth Etting, in "Knee Deep in Music," after singing "You've Got Me Crying Again," decides it is better to keep "Harvest Moon" than look for a new signature song. "Rough on Rats," an Aesop Fable, and an issue of Pathe News rounds out the bill.

NRA Is Urged To Probe Price Of Cotton Goods

Dr. Fred C. Howe Says Merchants Charge Excessive Hikes.

Investigation by the NRA of higher prices charged by cotton goods manufacturers was urged yesterday by Dr. Fred C. Howe, of the Farm Administration consumers council.

Dr. Howe said retailers have complained of unreasonable price advances, and they attribute the increase to higher costs caused by NRA codes. He also said reports from ten major cities show "propaganda against the cotton processing tax still is influencing sales clerks handling retail cotton goods."

"Use of the tax as an explanation for the price increases is about as prevalent in the ten cities as it was in Washington "before the recent meeting of Washington store executives," he said. "That meeting proved the processing tax is a negligible factor in the price markups on cotton goods, and yet investigations disclose that clerks in some stores still are explaining markups by citing the tax as the only cause, or as an important one."

Merchants, Dr. Howe said, do not feel that increases from 10 to 20 per cent are unreasonable. Some instances, however, were shown in which prices were increased 45 per cent.

The NRA has been investigating specific complaints of high prices on cotton goods recently. Announcement of the result of the inquiry is expected soon.

Few Bites!

Mice in Test May Be Taken to Warmer Climate.

Certain white mice that have been "doing their part" may have to migrate southward to continue their good work for the Government.

For months they have been submitted to mosquito bites for the cause of, not NRA, but SS—sleeping sickness. Like martyrs, these mice have carried on in the St. Louis laboratory of Dr. L. L. Williams, jr., of the U. S. Public Health Service.

But yesterday it became known here that the autumn chill in Missouri is reducing the mosquitoes' activity and Dr. Williams is considering moving to Florida with his charges.

Judges Urge State Official Aid Lynch Quiz

Attorney General's Help Requested by County Officials.

Baltimore, Oct. 20 (AP).—The three judges of the judicial circuit at Salisbury today asked Gov. Albert C. Ritchie to assign Attorney General William Preston Lane, jr., to assist in the investigation of Wednesday night's lynching at Princess Anne.

Gov. Ritchie previously stated he instructed Lane to be ready to take part in the investigation.

In the meantime Coroner Edgar A. Jones at Princess Anne notified Sheriff Luther Dougherty that he called a jury and would be ready to hear witnesses at any time.

The three judges—Chief Judge John R. Pattison and Associate Judges Robert F. Duer and Joseph J. Bailey—discussed the crime with State's Attorney John B. Robins and Sheriff Dougherty before making the request.

The grand jury, said the judges, would be recalled to hear the witnesses as soon as Lane, Robins and police officers were ready.

Lane held a conference today with Capt. Edward McK. Johnson, State police commander. Johnson was one of the 13 officers injured before the Negro, George Armwood, charged with an attack upon an aged farm woman, was taken from his cell and hanged by a mob.

Lane said he believed there was a good chance of securing an indictment of the mob leaders.

Fugitive Mexican Writes Judge He Will Return to Jail in 1937

Youth Tells "Senor" He'll Be English-Speaking Lawyer by Then.

Kansas City, Oct. 20 (AP).—A search for a young Mexican who escaped from Federal officers here October 6 was ended today with the receipt of a letter addressed to "Senor" Judge Albert L. Reeves, in which the youth promised to return to serve his sentence — after he had completed his legal education in 1937.

Jose Rodriguez, sentenced by Judge Reeves to serve five years on a charge of violating the Dyer motor theft act, mailed the letter written in Spanish at Juarez, Mexico.

"I feel very much that I had to escape, but as I told you in the letter I gave you, I have to complete my education before I enter prison or no one will give me a license to practice my profession," the letter said.

"When I finish in 1936-37, I shall return to serve the sentence. In the meantime I am going to learn your language more fully so I shall be able to speak to you. Without more until 1937, sadly, Joe Rodriguez."

Ohio State-Michigan Head Galaxy of Attractive Grid Battles Today

This Morning

With Shirley L. Povich.

I AM leading with my chin again this morning, and you can have my opinions on today's football games for what they are worth—3 cents on any news stand or by carrier boy.

Since the world series proved my jaw had certain glassy qualities, I am shaving with bon ami and coming back for more.

George Washington - Auburn—On paper it looks like Auburn, but, fortunately, they'll be playing on the Griffith Stadium lawn, so I'm going to press my luck and cast one not very loud vote for G. W.

Georgetown - Western Maryland—The Green Terrors ain't what they used to be. Neither is Georgetown, for that matter. But that 20-20 tie with Manhattan helps me make up my mind in favor of G. U.

Maryland-V. M. I.—Any team that can hold Tulane scoreless for one half certainly should beat V. M. I. One ballot for Maryland, with a prayer.

Ohio State - Michigan — The Buckeyes are loaded this season, and, anyway, who's afraid of the big, bad Wolverine? Not Povich. Let's go, Ohio State!

Princeton-Columbia—The Tiger vs. the Lion. Lou Little is a great coach, but his boys will have to shift for themselves out there on the field. Princeton has been a long time waiting for this. Methinks it will be Princeton.

Carnegie Tech - Notre Dame—South Bend has its Irish up. I can't seem to forget that 3-0 score of Carnegie against Xavier last week. On the strength of that, I'll string along with Notre Dame.

Fordham-Boston College—They have the makings up there on Fordham road. And Boston College has been no great shucks for a coupla seasons. One confirmed vote for Fordham.

Harvard - Holy Cross — The Crimson can't afford to lose this one. Competition for the Boston patronage is too keen. Those Amherst boys are developing nicely under Eddie Casey. I'll take Harvard.

New York U. - Colgate — No longer are they the Violent Violets. On form, it looks like Colgate. Okay, then, Colgate.

Penn-Dartmouth — Here's the oldest continuous rivalry in football. A couple of big guys who aren't so hot this season. That being the case, I'll take Penn.

Navy-Virginia—Pitt licked the tar out of Navy, and Ohio State buried Virginia, 75 to 0. Drawing my own conclusions, it's Navy by several points.

Yale-Brown—You pays your money and takes your choice. But Yale always has one good game in its system. One very, very timid ballot for Old Eli.

Army-Illinois—Army never has had a bad team and the Illini are having an off season. There's nothing in the records that requires serious consideration. The old Army game should win.

Chicago-Purdue — The Boilermakers aren't so tough this season. And Chicago is up and coming. You know what I'm leading up to—Chicago.

Minnesota - Pittsburgh—The Gophers are up against it. Pitt will probably gopher several touchdowns. Oh, you Pittsburgh.

Northwestern-Indiana — It has the makings of a swell scoreless tie. But Northwestern looks a wee bit the better. Thus, Northwestern.

Florida-North Carolina—Nothing much to choose from. But the Tarheels figure to do better. So, with my fingers crossed, North Carolina.

Georgia Tech-Tulane—The Green Wave is but a ripple this season. And Tech is the team that licked Auburn. On the strength of that—Georgia Tech.

Tennessee-Alabama—The Southeastern Conference title may be at stake here. Tennessee was lucky to win last season. It's Alabama's turn, anyway.

Washington and Lee-Kentucky—They're are a nice lot of boys down in Virginia, but Ol' Kaintuck has the football players. Without even looking—Kentucky.

Oregon State - Southern California—Oregon looks overmatched. Anyway, its hard to pick anybody to beat the Trojans. So, with firmness, Southern Cal.

Strutt Duquesne Star As Detroit Bows, 14-0

Pittsburgh, Pa., Oct. 20 (U.P.).—Duquesne University scored its sixth victory of the season, defeating the Detroit University eleven, 14 to 0, in a night game.

Art Strutt, brilliant half back, was the outstanding hero in the Duquesne victory. Strutt scored boh touchdowns in the fourth quarter, one on a dash of 52 yards and the other on a plunge from the 1-yard line.

Union Sports Head Dies.

Jackson, Tenn., Oct. 20 (AP).—William Wallace Dunn, athletic director of Union University, died early today. Death was attributed to a stroke suffered two months ago. He was 45 years ago.

Illinois Host To Army's Eleven

Princeton and Columbia, Unbeaten, Hold East's Grid Spotlight.

Harvard and Yale Facing Tests; Notre Dame to Battle Carnegie.

NEW YORK, Oct. 20 (U.P.).—Football fans of the Nation will be entertained tomorrow with the biggest collection of important early season encounters in years as gridiron powers collide on all fronts in significant conference and intersectional clashes.

When the dust settles after the fighting candidates for regional and national honors will stand out like Great Danes in a dog pound, and ranks of the undefeated will be thinned.

Three big intersectional brawls feature the program. Prebattle blue prints indicate that Bob Zuppke's Illinois eleven will beat Army at Cleveland. Pittsburgh is favored to down Minnesota at Minneapolis, and Notre Dame should trample Carnegie Tech at Pittsburgh.

While these and other important intersectional melees are being staged, regional and conference powers will be battling for footholds on championship trails as follows:

Big Ten.

A contest which promises to stand out as the most thrilling of the day pits Michigan, last year's Big Ten champion, against the powerful Ohio State Buckeys. Although Harry Kipke's Wolverines are given a slight edge, this affair has the selectors worried. Purdue's Boilermakers invade Chicago's formidable eleven; Wisconsin starts a come-back against Iowa, and Indiana tangles with Northwestern. The other two conference teams, Minnesota and Illinois, meet outsiderers.

East.

The big Eastern game brings together two ancient rivals who are ambitious to make a trip to the Pasadena Rose Bowl, Princeton and Columbia. Fritz Crisler's Tigers are favored over the smart Columbia eleven because of their wealth of reserves. Harvard atnd Yale receive their first stiff tests, against Holy Cross and Brown University, respectively. Jim Crowley's new Fordham charges tangle with Boston College. Pennsylvania meets Dartmouth, and Colgate invades New York University.

South.

Virtually all members of the Southern Conference are playing outsiders. Duke, conqueror of Tennessee, invades Davidson (N. C.); North Carolina plays Florida, and Georgia Tech meets Tulane. Louisiana State, of the Southeast Conference, engages Arkansas, of the Southwest, while Mississippi and Sewanee meet in an all-Southwest game, as do Tennessee and Alabama. Texas Christian and Texas A. and M. tangle in a Southwest Conference collision.

Big Six.

Nebraska and Kansas State, running neck and neck for leadership in the Big Six, fight it out, while Oklahoma and Iowa State meet in another conference clash. Missouri and Kansas play outsiders.

Pacific Coast.

Southern California, fresh from a triumph over St. Mary's, engages Oregon State's unbeaten eleven in the feature Coast Conference meeting. Washington State engages California, and other conference teams play outsiders.

Nurmi and Wife Part After 2-Year Wedlock

Helsingfors, Finland, Oct. 20 (AP).—Paavo Nurmi and his bride of less than two years have separated and, despite denials, it has been learned Mrs. Nurmi already has taken steps toward obtaining a divorce and custody of their year-old boy, Matti.

The Associated Press correspondent interviewed the wife at Turku, native town of the world-famous foot-racer, and verified the reports that the couple disagreed on Paavo's interest in athletics as well as on the future of their son, whose feet caused disappointment to a father anxious to develop another runner in the family.

Middies Meet Cavaliers Today

Brisk Annapolis Game Expected; Virginians Are Heavier.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Oct. 20 (Spl.).—The stage is all set and with prospects good for favorable weather, local fans are anticipating a fine sample of football tomorrow when the elevens of the Naval Academy and University of Virginia clash in Thompson Stadium in what will be the last home stand for the Tars. Their remaining five big battles are to be staged in Baltimore, Philadelphia, New York or Princeton. The Quaker City will be the scene of the Penn and Army struggles.

The Old Dominion squad, 36 strong, headed by Coach Fred Dawson, reached Annapolis early this afternoon and players went through an hour's nifty workout on the stadium field. At the close of the session, Coach Dawson said his charges are keyed for the fray and if they play to the form shown against Columbia last Saturday, Navy will be in for a busy afternoon.

Martin Still on Bench.

Save for the absense of Harry Martin, triple threat quarter back, who has been suffering from water on the knee since the Ohio State debacle, the Cavaliers were pronounced in good physical condition. The Virginians played as though they had stage fright and what not, against the Buckeyes, Dawson said.

Soon after the Cavaliers left the field, the Middies came out for their final tuning up, which consisted of a brisk run through signals and formations, and all phases of kicking and handling kicks. Head Coach Rip Miller said the full strength of his line would be available for service, but some of the back field men still are ailing from the Pittsburgh game, and he will take no chances of aggravating their condition. This is particularly true of Buzz Borries, back field ace, who he said would not get into the game.

Virginia Line Beefier.

Virginia will put a somewhat heavier team than Navy on the field, according to statistics, the preponderance being confined to the forward wall. Incidentally, close students of the grid sport will be interested in the battle between Capt. Ray Burger, weighing more than 200 pounds, star right tackle of the Cavaliers, who will play opposite Bill Brooks, a rangy Texan who scales 187 and is one of Navy's best defensive bets.

Illinois Favored To Defeat Army

Cleveland, Oct. 20 (AP).—Bob Zuppke's experienced Illini and the grim but determined Army came to Cleveland today for tomorrow's intersectional scrap in the stadium—and the rubber game.

Zuppke boasts he has the best team he's had since 1929, when the Illini ran over the Cadets, 17 to 7, and the 21-0 victory over Wisconsin last week makes the Midwestern eleven the favorite.

The West Pointers dropped caution this week for full force scrimmage before coming to the Forest City, determined to make a scrap out of it, in memory of their 13-0 victory over the Illini in 1930.

As if carrying out this philosophy, Lieut. Gar Davidson, in announcing his starting line-up tomorrow, said he would open with all the strength at his command, with Paul Johnson at quarter.

Zuppke also expects to start his regular outfit, but was a bit uncertain about the tackle positions, and he is considering two first string subs for the posts.

Cleveland had football fever today, with luncheons, and bunting, and ticket rushes coming into bloom suddenly. Some 40,000 are expected to watch the battle.

20,000 Fans Expected at Ball Park

Colonials Must Check Phipps and Speedy Mates Today.

McCarver, Baker and Bomba to Bolster Locals' Defense.

A SQUAD of 30 finely groomed athletes from Auburn were quartered on District soil last night, awaiting the whistle that will send them into battle against George Washington University this afternoon at Griffith Stadium. The kick-off will be at 2:30 o'clock. More than 20,000 fans, a banner crowd for the season, is expected to see the game.

Up from the South with an array of veteran talent, which, with Tennessee, ruled the land of cotton last year, the Bengals will give Washington fans, and the G. W. eleven, their first taste of major league football this year. With a swift and elusive quartet of backs, bulwarked by a light, but durable line, the visitors pack a potent wallop, a punch expected to be a trifle too strong for the Colonials. Auburn is rated a 7-5 favorite.

Phipp Chief Threat.

Undefeated in 13 consecutive games, the Auburn team met its Waterloo last Saturday, succumbing to Georgia Tech, 16-6. Statistics of the game, however, show that Tech was outplayed after the first few minutes of combat.

Gone is Jimmy Hitchcock, Auburn's all-American halfback of last season, but "Firpo" Phipps, rated his equal, remains. "Gump" Ariail the all-Southern end; Al Rogers, a mere wisp of a halfback, and "Ripper" Williams, quarterback, comprise another group of players who have won recognition.

One of the three triple-threat men on the squad, Phipps excels at passing. Handling the pigskin with the skill and accuracy of a basket ball player, he throws with his left hand, and can hit a dime at 20 yards. Southern sports writers look to him to succeed Hitchcock on the all-American.

Auburn Backs Speedy.

Auburn's starting back field of Williams, quarter; Kimbrell and Rogers, halves, and Dupree, full, is one of the speediest in the South. Dupree is the Southeast Conference sprint champion. Phipps is held in reserve for situations where his drive and speed can be utilized to the fullest extent.

With seven men back in action who were held out of the Clemson game because of Southern Conference rules, George Washington is ready to make its first bid of the season for national recognition. A victory over the visitors would go far toward elevating the downtown school into the upper strata of the game.

Johnny Baker, quarter back; Don Bomba, full back, and "Nig" McCarver, half back, all regulars, are the most important of the seven returning men. Hardy Pearce, 200-pound tackle, will resume his regular position at right tackle.

George Washington polished up its offense yesterday afternoon in a secret practice. Auburn went through a light limbering-up exercise at the stadium.

Maryland Has Edge Over V. M. I.

Old Liners Favored to Win at Lexington Despite Previous Defeats.

MARYLAND UNIVERSITY Football Team yesterday shook the dust of College Park from its feet and departed for Lexington, Va., where today it meets Virginia Military Institute, an old Southern Conference rival, in a home-coming game for the Cadets. Despite the unimpressive records of both teams, a large crowd is expected to view the proceedings.

Buddy Yaeger's kicking, Dick Nelson's passing and Earl Widmyer's ball carrying are three important factors in Maryland's offense which make the Old Liners a slight favorite over their opponent. Virginia Poly and Tulane scored successive victories over the Marylanders during the past two weeks, but in each instance the team showed improvement and gave evidence of developing into a formidable aggregation.

Virginia Military has lost four consecutive games to Emory-Henry, Duke, Army and Davidson, and is faced with its leanest season in recent years. A win today would go far toward redeeming the team and restoring it to the fans' good graces.

For the first time since the opening game of the season, Maryland has its full strength available. Ed Minion, regular tackle, who suffered a broken hand early in the year, will be back at his old post. He played througout most of the Tulane game but did not start.

Maryland is pinning its hopes on a superior running attack, to which the coaches devoted all of their time during the past week. Equipped with new plays and a slightly changed style, the Terps will be a hard lot to stop this afternoon.

50,000 to Watch Irish Battle Tech

Pittsburgh, Oct. 20 (AP).—The "Fighting Irish" of Notre Dame rolled into town on a rattler today, worked out at Shadyside Academy and then got a good night's sleep in preparation for their game with Carnegie Tech on the morrow.

Coach Hunk Anderson announced three changes in the line-up. Steve Banas will not start at full back and Elser will take his place. Tony Mazziotti, first-string quarter back.

The advance seat sale indicates a crowd of about 50,000 will watch the game.

West Va. Beaten By Temple Rally

Philadelphia, Oct. 20 (AP).—A last minute touchdown after a 35-yard advance gave Glenn (Pop) Warner's Temple University Owls a 13 to 7 victory over West Virginia's football team before 20,000 fans in Temple Stadium tonight. Johnny Stonik made the final touchdown. Quarter Back Don Watts counted for Temple and Left Half Covey scored for the Mountaineers, both in the third period.

Georgia, by 13-12, Nips Mercer Bears

Outplayed Crackers Turn at Last to Win.

Macon, Ga., Oct. 20 (AP).—Outplayed for a large part of the game, the University of Georgia today needed the difference of a placement to win from the Mercer Bears, 13 to 12.

Short, sharp thrusts accounted for both touchdowns scored by the Bulldogs of the Southeastern Conference, while the steady, ferocious attack of the Bears battered out the Mercer scores.

The Bears took up the attack as soon as the game opened and kept pounding away at Georgia's goal until McQuaig plunged over.

It was not until late in the second period that Georgia was able to get past midfield and the Bulldogs never again threatened.

A touchdown run of 44 yards by Cy Grant, who converted with a placement, and Brown's 42-yard jaunt that placed Chapman in position to score brought Georgia victory. Mercer came back to cross the Georgia goal again, but the try for extra point failed.

Hilltop Is Eager To Oppose Terrors

Foes Weakened by Hurts, and Former Defeats May Be Avenged.

FOR six years Georgetown has been awaiting just such an opportunity as today's game at the Baltimore Stadium is generally believed to offer against their perennial foes—and conquerors—the Western Maryland Terrors. But the opportunity may avail them nothing if the Terrors' inexplicably weak offense suddenly clicks into the smooth action of which it is believed capable.

Coach Dick Harlow has been whipping his charges into a perfect defense game, which will offer strong opposition to the Hoya attack. The Terrors' drills have been dedicated largely to defense against

Finn Scores On 67-Yard Gallop

'Noogans Make Only One Threat as 6,000 See Night Game.

Cardinals Smash Way to Two Touchdowns in Final Quarter.

ELEVEN players, wrapped in the Red and Black yarn of Catholic University, were molded into a human steam roller that crushed a gallant, but weak, University of Chattanooga team by a score of 25 to 0, before a crowd of 6,000 last night at Griffith Stadium. It was the visitors' first defeat of the season.

Rated among the best of the smaller Southern teams and with a brilliant 16-to-12 victory over Oglethorpe dangling from its belt, Chattanooga was expected to extend the Cardinals. But for the most part the game resembled a C. U. signal practice, with time out now and then to run the ball over for a touchdown.

Cardinals Have Drive.

Starting in the first period when they reeled off four first downs in rapid succession and punched across their first touchdown, the Brooklanders drove the invaders before them in a ceaseless drive that netted 288 yards gained from scrimmage. 'Nooga was almost powerless in the first half, gaining only 30 yards, and did but little better in the second half when credited with 70 yards.

Tom Finn, a rangy half-back with a pair of Mack Truck pistons for legs, bored through the center of the line from the 4-yard mark for C. U.'s first touchdown. A nifty 20-yard canter around end by Johnny Jankowski placed the ball in scoring position.

Chattanooga remained unscored on throughout the remainder of the half, through no fault of its own. The Cards' attack just bogged down at critical moments in the enemy's territory.

'Nooga Makes Threat.

It was during the second period that Chattanooga made its lone scoring threat, aided by a C. U. error. Backed up on its own 18-yard line following an exchange of kicks and a 15-yard penalty assessed Catholic for holding, Tommy Oliver punted outside on the 25-yard mark where the blue-helmeted 'Noogans came into possession of the pigskin.

The effort was futile. Three attempts to penetrate the home team's bristling defense failed and the ball was kicked into the end zone for a touchback. Beurah McAll, Bill Venable and Don Hornsby bore the TURNING on the power exactly when it was needed and capitalizing the breaks that came its way, Eastern defeated Western yesterday afternoon on the Central Stadium field before 2,500 scholastic football fans, 18-0.

Joe Keegin, wiry Lincoln Park half back, was the star of the day, directing the team in fine style, playing for the breaks, passing and kicking, but he must share honors with Richardson, diminutive blue-clad back field mate, whose interception of a Western forward pass on the Eastern 38-yard line and his 62-yard dash for a score, was the outstanding piece of football in the series to date.

Fumbles Mark Start.

After a sluggish start in which Joe Fumble starred for both sides, the Eastern gridders worked the ball down to the Western 40. Powerhouse smashes at the big red Western wall by Shaw and Keegin brought the ball to the 3-yard-line from where Joe Mills plunged over right guard for the score.

Western came back in the third quarter to take the ball from its own 25 to the Eastern 47, with Schleicher and Corcoran breaking through the Eastern line. But Jimmy Corcoran tossed an ill-fated heave to nobody in particular and in a trice it was tucked safely under Richardson's arm and he was off for the touchdown.

Half way through the fourth quarter Eastern started on another touchdown march. Two long forward passes, sandwiched between a quartet of line plunges, brought the ball to the Western 28. It was here that the powerful Western line held and the Lincoln Parkers were forced to kick.

Gamage Blocks Kick.

Bob Gamage broke through and blocked the boot and the ball bounded into the outstretched hands of Keegin, who dashed through the center of the clashing lines to the Western 3, Corcoran making a sensational tackle.

On the next play, Keegin zipped a short pass over the line to Right End Davis, who grabbed the oval off his shoetops.

Eastern ran up nine first downs to Western's seven.

an open game, concentrating on defense against an aerial attack and outside running plays.

The possibility of Western Maryland repeating over the Hoyas, whom they have defeated four times in five years of play, is generally conceded to be weakened by the absence of three stellar Green and Gold performers from the line-up. Dunn, star back, and Kaplan, tackle, will be kept on the bench by shoulder injuries. Schilling, one of Western Maryland's better ends, will not play because of an injured leg.

With their first team intact excepting for the absence of Capt. Callahan, who will be forced to view the game from the bench because of injuries, the Hoyas will go into today's game well equipped with a knowledge of Western Maryland plays on which the frosh have been drilling them. Capt. Callahan's position at center will be filled by Carpenter.

Hitting the Headpin . . .

ONE of the largest bowling crowds of the season packed all available space at the Lucky Strike bowling alleys last night to watch the battle for leadership in the National Capital League. Led by Ed Blakeney, the Silver Spring Skating Rink put the skids under Fountain Hams, taking all three games. Blakeney's 158 game and 409 set featured the winner's spurt for undisputed possession of first place. The Skaters' high set was 1,834. Gene McGolrick (Fountain Hams) had high game of 162 and high set of 384.

The King Pin Team, pounding the maples with almost uncanny accuracy, rolled the first set of the season over 1,900, cracking out 1,938 and taking three games in their match with Book of Washington.

All games rolled by these teams exceeded the 600 mark. King Pin's games were 619, 651 and 668. Bill Miller with 410, Hokie Smith with 391 and Louie Pantos with 399 figured prominently.

Sam Simon, who has been rolling high sets consistently, cracked out 423 for his fifth 400 set of the season. His games were 152, 151 and 120.

In the other matches Star Service Station won 3 from Peoples Life Insurance, a new team in the league; Temple Hand Laundry took the Lucky Strike Barbers to the cleaners by winning the odd game and Judd & Detweiler swept its match from Lucky Strike. Lucky Strike has won only 1 game out of its last 15.

George Isemann, paired with Bob Temple, of Hyattsville, national junior champion, will roll a special five-game match against Ray Barnes and Hap Franz, of Baltimore, tonight on the Overlea alleys.

The Sunrise Baking team, composed of Ollie Pacini, Frank Michou, George Honey, Jack Talbert and "Whip" Litchfield, journeys to Annapolis for a special five-game match with the Annapolis Buick Co. Bill Arnold, rolling with the Annapolis team, is one of the 10 ranking bowlers of the country.

Fred Buchholtz's Occidental team also takes a trip to Baltimore tonight to complete its match with the Lexington aggregation.

In the Federal Trade Commission League at the Arcadia alleys, the Falcons were high with a game of 517 and set of 1,489. Whiteley (Falcons) led in individual feats with 119 and 324.

Charley Bernhardt, toppling the maples for a 153 game and set of 380, aided Highway No. 2 in recording a high team game of 573 in the District Government League. High team set of 1,642 was taken by Highway No. 1. Bernhardt, who also rolls with Arcadia in the District League, had a 153 in that league the night before.

Knowles (Mails and Files) was the individual star in the Interstate Commerce Commission loop at Arcadia, capturing high game and set with 146 and 354. Mails and Files rolled 549 and Traffic's team set of 1,587 was unsurpassed. In the Building and Contractors League, Scalett (A. W. Lee) rolled high individual game and set with 147 and 383. D. C. Butcher, with a 609 and 1,668, exceeded all other scores.

Jim Stewart's 127 game and Bill Murphy's 346 set featured the list of individual feats in the Quartermaster (Men's) League at the Columbia alleys. Administrative led with 553 and 1,545. In the Quartermaster (Ladies) League, Mrs. Boller lived up to her name in capturing individual honors with a high game of 114 and set of 312. Construction took team honors, rolling a high team game and high team set of 490 and 1,405.

Play Sunday.

The Maryland A. C. will meet the Marion A. C. at Seat Pleasant at 2:30 tomorrow. The game will be preceded by a preliminary tilt between Capitol Heights and Congress Heights at 12:30.

Play and Practice.

All Adams Birch players are requested to report in uniform at 5:30 today at the Terminal field to practice for tomorrow's game with the Palace A. C. on the Silver Spring field at 2:30.

brunt of the team's offense and consequently took most of the punishment.

Catholic went back to the important business of winning the ball game in the third period and scored its second touchdown on a brilliant 67-yard run by Tom Finn, who wrestled free of two Chattanooga tacklers to get into the open.

Subs Break Loose.

Substitutes were turned loose at the start of the final period and did very well, ringing up two more touchdowns to place the game far beyond the yearn of the disheartened foe. Gearty scored the first touchdown on a line plunge following a pass from Finn to Fleming, and Bob McVean burst off-tackle for the second after a sustained march from midfield.

Johnny Jankowski, who accounted for the majority of the victors' gains in the first half, and the all-around work of Capt. Phil Gross and Bill Conter, in the line, were the outstanding C. U. players. Venable, Ellis and Hansen turned in the best efforts for Chattanooga.

Old Foes Clash At Laurel Today

Broker's Tip and Head Play Renew Rivalry.

An old rivalry will be renewed today when E. R. Bradley's Broker's Tip and Mrs. Silas B. Mason's Head Play face the barrier in the $5,000 Maryland Handicap at Laurel. These two arch rivals in the Kentucky Derby are coming back to stake events after a long rest, but the mile and a quarter of the Maryland does not figure to duplicate the Derby duel.

Both Broker's Tip, Derby winner, and Head Play, winner of the Preakness, in which the Bradley colt ran last, have been out once in the last ten days. Broker's Tip ran last and Head Play second in sprint races.

The field of the Maryland includes all the important stake winners with the exception of Mr. Khayyam. War Glory, a Man o' War offspring, probably will go to the post the favorite. If the track is heavy, Mrs. Dodge Sloane's Inlander, victor in the Arlington and Travers, probably will be heavily backed.

Women Keenly Interested in Post Golf

90 Already Signed Up, and Tee Entries Will Be Allowed.

NINETY women golfers already are entered in the match play with handicap tournament for The Washington Post Trophy beginning Monday at the Columbia Country Club course.

The tournament committee, composed of Mrs. W. F. Holtzman, of Army and Navy; Mrs. Douglas Tschiffely, of Washington Golf and Country Club, and Mrs. H. R. Quinter, of Columbia, was busy last night arranging the pairings and starting times which will be announced in tomorrow morning's papers.

Since it is a custom of many women players to wait until the eleventh hour to enter, the committee has decided to accept post entries at the first tee Monday morning.

The beautiful Post Trophy is being placed in competition for the first time, and never before has so much interest been aroused in a women's tournament as is shown for the one scheduled for next week. It is different from anything ever staged by the Women's District of Columbia Golf Association, having 18 holes of medal play with handicap to be followed by five days of match play with stroke allowance.

Among the entries yesterday were Mrs. J. A. Rogers and Miss Betty Myer, Army and Navy; Mrs. Bert Gamble, Manor; Mrs. A. A. Minnix, Columbia; Mrs. John C. Shorey, and Mrs. Leo Walper, Kenwood, and Mrs. F. J. Godfrey, unattached.

Columbia's course hummed with activity yesterday morning, as more than 60 women took advantage of the practice rounds. A 92 by Miss Elizabeth Houghton, of Chevy Chase, was among the low scorers reported.

Mrs. Jones Captures Virginia Golf Crown

Richmond, Va., Oct. 20 (AP).—A 20-foot putt that fell for a birdie today gave Mrs. Jean S. Jones, of Richmond, a one-up victory over the sensational Lily Harper, of Portsmouth, in the finals of the Middle Atlantic golf championship.

One down at the turn, Mrs. Jones played the last nine holes in 40 strokes, just one over women's par, and climaxed her brilliant performance with that magnificent putt on the eighteenth green.

Miss Harper, 17-year-old school girl, had her rival two down at the twelfth, where a fine recovery enabled her to get a birdie four.

Olsen and Shikat Meet Thursday in Mat Bout

Cliff Olsen, current "fair-haired boy" of local rassledom, will meet Dick Shikat, former claimant to the heavyweight wrestling championship, in a two-hour match at the Washington Auditorium Thursday.

The two grunt-and-groan gladiators ground out a 30-minute draw here last Thursday. The usual supporting features will be announced later.

Terry Gets Old Job.

Memphis, Tenn., Oct. 20 (AP).—Bill Terry will be back at his old job this winter.

The oil company for which he has been working since 1920 announced today that the manager of the world champion New York Giants had signed a contract to continue with the sales force this winter as in the past.

Holy Comforters Win.

The Holy Comforter 100-pound team yesterday defeated the Fourteenth and B Streets Southeast football team, 32-6.

Hilltop Preps Romp Over St. Albans

Georgetown Juniors Take Cathedral Boys For 19-7 Ride.

IN one of the outstanding prep school battles of the season, Georgetown Prep yesterday defeated St. Alban's on the Garrett Park Field, 19-7.

Tommy Keating, brilliant little Hoya back, was the outstanding star of the game, scoring his team's three touchdowns. However, Capt. Don McNamara pulled off the ace thrill of the set-to when he traveled 70 yards after intercepting a Saint forward pass, which put the Georgetowners within easy distance of the goal line for the third touchdown.

The Garrett Parkers got off to an early start when Nee, left end, recovered a blocked punt and dashed 12 yards to the St. Alban's 20. On the next play Tommy Keating scooted right end for the touchdown.

The Preppers' second score occurred in the second inning, when, after a steady march down the field, Keating took the ball through right tackle for the six points.

The Saints picked up steam in the last quarter and, with steady line smashes, had the Garrett Park entry with its back against the goal line. A single play and the ball was over for St. Alban's lone tally.

St. Alban's rolled up a total of 12 first downs to Georgetown Prep's 8.

Tigers Sign Gehringer As Player for 1934

Detroit, Oct. 20 (AP).—Frank J. Navin, president of the Detroit American League Baseball Club, announced today that Second Baseman Charley Gehringer has renewed his contract for another year with the Detroit Tigers.

Gehringer, confirming Navin's announcement, said he was actuated in signing by reports that he had said he expected to be made playing manager of the Detroit Club, succeeding Stanley R. (Bucky) Harris, who resigned. He denied he had made any such statement, and said the position never had been offered him.

Pegler Says

Press Writers at Games Better Treated Than in Old Days.

By Westbrook Pegler.

NEW YORK, Oct. 20 (Spl.).—The football expert leads a life of pampered luxury at Harvard, Yale and Princeton nowadays, but it was not always thus and the veterans in our business take pleasure and pride in recalling what sturdy and faithful martyrs to duty we were in the days before the covered press-coop and the installation of electric lights.

Harvard, Yale and Princeton were the last of the big schools in this section of the country to yield to the plaintive and sometimes petulant outcries of the members of the fourth estate as we suffered at our work on Saturday afternoons or anticipated our sufferings before the big games. Until a few years ago there was neither shelter nor light in the press sections of any of these three football plants. These sections, being up on the rim, were slightly more exposed to the weather than any of the customers' seats and it is a fact, provable by the experience, if not by any scientific process, that the weather gets colder and generally meaner as soon as the mass of the crowd has left.

One of Them Weakened.

I disrecall which member of the big three was the first to weaken, but I believe it was Harvard, under the athletic administration of Will Bingham, and with Arnold Horween as head coach, which built the first roof, and strung first electric lights.

Anyway, they all three relented about five or six years ago, and the job of covering a football game in the big three ceased to be an ordeal and became something of a pleasure. And, very strangely, since the stands have been covered the weather on the Seaboard has seemed to soften up, for I do not recall any big game at any of these stadia since the improvements were installed which was played in any such sleet or rain as fell on some memorable occasions before.

The worst experience of all was the game at Yale which is still referred to as the Ducky Pond game. Ducky Pond was the Yale captain and the hero of the afternoon, and upstairs in the coop the rain short-circuited most of the wires and made pulp of the paper so that a man could not even make pencil notes. Several of the journalists caught bad colds and there was great indignation and self-sympathy among us but, at that, I do not believe there was a single case of pneumonia or tuberculosis.

Over-emphasis Again.

The final argument against the roofs and lights was that such concessions to the press would smack of overemphasis and an admission that the schools actually craved football publicity for the sake of the gate receipts which publicity would bring. But at last it seemed to be agreed that they were engaged in the football business and that it would be no disgrace to admit as much.

I do not know that the modern comforts have improved the literary quality of the essays written about the games. We used to light flares of newspapers or hold matches until they burned our fingers to see the keyboard, but some very good newspaper pieces were written under such conditions, even so.

And now some of the Midwestern journalists tell me that they have to work in press-coops in their territory which are just as primitive as those of Harvard, Yale and Princeton used to be. Sometimes, also, as at Minnesota one big day last year, the weather is only a couple of degrees above zero.

But as between our set and the athletic authorities of Harvard, Yale and Princeton nowadays, everything is very chummy and social. They even come up with a big can of coffee and a basket of crullers between the acts now, and we exchange friendly remarks with the managers and find them agreeable and hope that it is mutual. Both sides have softened up.

Charlie Council Wins Optimist's Golf Crown

Charlie Council won the Optimists Club golf championship at Indian Spring yesterday, nosing out Ed Bateman, who turned in the second lowest handicap score. Low gross for the tournament went to David G. Morris, with George Richardson running up for the honors. Hugh Phillips captured the blind bogey and Bill Curtis was second.

Landon and St. Paul's Fight to Scoreless Tie

Landon School and St. Paul's, of Baltimore, battled to a scoreless tie yesterday afternoon at the St. Alban's field.

The Landon eleven completely outplayed the Baltimoreans but on three trips past the St. Paul five-yard mark failed to put the ball over for a tally.

The District preppers registered 12 first downs to the Saints' 4. The locals clicked mainly through the fine playing of Castell, Leizear and Slaughter.

The line-up:

Daniel Soot Makes Game Finish to Win Laurel Steeplechase Feature at 6-1

Senado Sets Pace, Later Weakens

Chatmoss Takes Lead at Far Turn, Wins Sixth at $105 Mutuel.

NEVER worse than second in as thrilling a steeplechase race as has been seen here this season, Daniel Soot, the property of Mrs. F. M. Gould, won the Bucklands Handicap at Laurel yesterday. The race was over a jumping course of about 2 miles and the small field allowed even the usual racing fans to keep track of positions of every horse.

For more than a mile and a half of the contest, Senado stock was sky high. The Barry Vail Stable representative set a fast pace, but Old Daniel was being nursed along a few lengths away with Louis d'Or running by his side.

It was not until the next to the last jump that Senado weakened and Daniel Soot drew out to defeat Louis d'Or by a length and a quarter. Senado, stumbling to the finish, failed to save the third money from Escapade.

Old Daniel ran a mediocre race the other day and the important money ducked him. So his backers received a $14.40 mutuel.

Some Good Beats Maidens.

Ideal weather brought out a crowd of some 7,000. The races were run over a slow course that was nearing a fast condition as the program progressed.

Some Good made good in the first race, a sprint of 6 furlongs for maiden 2-year-olds. Some Good fought his way to the front on the back stretch and was never headed thereafter. Sturdy Oak wiggled into the second money ahead of Honey Sweet. Bejshak rode the winner and favorite, which paid a $5 mutuel.

The Aste-Ughetta entry of St. Nick and Some Knight ran one, two in the second race, much to the delight of holders of ticket No. 2303. St. Nick did his own pacemaking and his own finishing, although the stablemate came with a closing rush. Westivity, a 69-1 shot, was third. The entry paid $9.20, which was $10.60 less than Westivity paid to show.

A new high for Maryland mutuels this season was set in the sixth when Chatmoss galloped to the finish line in front to pay $105.40 for the usual deuce in the sixth race. Chatmoss took the lead on the far turn and drew away during the stretch run.

Strange as It Seems

Davis-Elkins' unusual score against St. Louis University several years ago was made on a play that started after the game was over, and, strange as it seems, on a play that started with the ball in possession of St. Louis. In the final minute of play St. Louis opened up a passing attack, and on the final play a Davis-Elkins player interferred with the passer. The final whistle sounded, but the ball was called back to give St. Louis another chance because of the penalty.

In this last play, another forward, the ball was intercepted by a Davis-Elkins player who carried it over for a touchdown—scoring on a play that started after the game was over.

Arizona, as a great copper producing State, looked to its own motoring public as a market for copper when the legislature provided that automobile license plates were to be made of this material. The move served the triple purpose of making Arizona plates distinctive, using up part of the copper production, and popularizing the use of copper.

Now Arizona business firms and advertisers have found a novel method of making their letterheads distinctive. They use metallic copper instead of paper. Business cards, posters and other common paper products are being replaced to some extent by the use of sheet copper.

Bakery Cost Figures Ready For Sen. King

Data on District Prices Will Be Submitted Next Week.

Data on District production costs and selling prices of bread will be submitted Tuesday to Senator William King, of Utah, chairman of the Senate District Committee, Robert E. Lynch, assistant corporation counsel, announced yesterday.

Figures have been obtained from bakers showing costs of ingredients, manufacturing, labor, selling and delivery for September last year, March this year and the present time.

One concern, the American Stores Co., will be reported as refusing to furnish the information requested Mr. Lynch said. Local officers of the company said they had forwarded the data to Philadelphia for decision. Other bakeries have furnished information, Mr. Lynch said.

The data is being compiled by H. J. Landrus, of the Federal Trade Commission, who, with Dr. Frederic Howe, consumers' counsel of the Agriculture Adjustment Administration, participated in the inquiry.

Senator King requested information to determine whether there was need for a detailed inquiry into the prices and profits of the baking business.

Radio Waves and Ripples

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT will go to the Nation in another "Fireside Chat" Sunday night.

The National and Columbia broadcasters late yesterday were asked to clear the air waves for the Chief Executive at 10 p. m. for about 20 minutes.

While the subject of these broadcasts is always withheld by the White House until delivery time, at least two phases of the recovery program are known to occupy much of the Presidential mind—revolt in the farm belt and Russia.

THE name of Leopold Stokowski was on another Columbia contract yesterday. It meant Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra broadcasting nightly except Saturday in 15-minute periods in addition to Columbia's now-and-then pick-up of the Stokowski Friday afternoon concerts.

It will be the first time, says Columbia, that a symphony of the Stokowski proportions has attempted quarter-hour concerts. The major symphonies usually perform publicly no less than an hour and a half. Columbia contemplates a new technique in program-making will be required in view of the scarcity of classic symphonies which can be performed in 15 minutes.

Columbia has quoted Stokowski as planning "to offer examples of the highest levels reached in music from Bach to the present day, and I shall try to link each concert to the concert of yesterday and tomorrow. They will not be separated, but will be links in a continuous chain.

"At each concert I shall speak with the utmost brevity of what we are playing. . . "

The broadcasts are due to begin not later than November 27 at 9 p. m.

Stokowski was the last hope of the Columbia minds who tried for six months to interest the program series sponsor, one of the most lucrative radio ad accounts, in something from its repertory of shows. Success came when cigarette company officials listened to Stokowski.

From vaudeville have come Helen Yorke and Virginia Johnson to sing their own compositions and popular ballads for the Ed Wynn chain and WOL.

Whitecape.

WRC—"Creole Cabin," original ballad singing, 7:45 p. m.; Lucky Strike program, 9 p. m.; Saturday Night Dancing Party, B. A. Rolfe orchestra, 10 p. m. WMAL—Dr. Gilbert Wilcox Mead inaugurated as nineteenth president of Washington College, honorary degree conferred on President Roosevelt, 11 a. m.; Columbia-Princeton football, 1:45 p. m.; Cuckoo program, engaging nonsense, 10:30 p. m. WJSV—Michigan-Ohio State football, 1:45 p. m.; Tito Guizar, Mexican tenor, 6:45 p. m.; Gertrude Niessen, torch singer, 8:15 p. m. WOL — George Washington-Auburn football, 2 p. m.; Nordica Mandolin and Guitar Orchestra, 5:30; p. m.; Central Union Mission Glee Club, 8:30 p. m.

The broadcasters are talking in excited whispers about a horizontal power increase they think the Radio Commission might give them to offset a lot of wattage soon to be turned on in Mexico. They are thinking principally of what will happen when John R. Brinkley, the goat gland man, finishes installing a 150,000-watt transmitter just over the Texas line.

The commissioners so far have been successful in keeping whatever plans they have to themselves.

WOL minds can't see where a daytime power boost would do them much good. Regulations would require them to shut down to night power at sundown. So far no satisfactory way has been discovered of informing listeners just when the sun is to set each day, so they won't mistake power let-down for fading.

Maintaining a well-established tradition in radio marriages, Elsie Dotson, who succeeded Hester Beall as WRC hostess, slipped quietly away into Maryland Thursday night to become Mrs. Carl Morgan Richards. Bride and bridegroom are both from Salt Lake City, but didn't know about that until they met in the Capital a few years ago.

In writing his biography for the N. B. C. files here, Announcer Don Lowe made quite an item of his still extant engagement to a certain young somebody he partially identified as a Stokowski pianist.

N. B. C. studio hands, Youse, Luke and Yoemans, are working out a blending of their voices to provide the minds with a spare show. And banjo playing Lew Davie has had his WMAL spot changed from 10.15 a. m. Saturday to the same Friday period.

President Roosevelt, the First Secretary of the Chinese Legation, Gov. Ritchie, Radio Commission Vice Chairman Thad Brown, United States Flag Association and Children's Hospital were signers of some of the congratulatory messages WJSV managed to microphone during its first anniversary celebration last night.

"Pik and Pat," a WJSV show opening tomorrow night, is a recording of gags by "Molasses in January," funny team in N.B.C.'s Show Boat.

Columbia's publicity department looks a little overtrained on this one: "Arrangements have been completed for a committee of leading physicians and surgeons in this country to act in a consultative capacity with Dr. Guy O. Shirey, medical officer of the Byrd Second Antarctic Expedition, during that group's two-year sojourn in Little America. In the event that any member of the expedition contracts a serious illness, symptoms of which are difficult to diagnose, Dr. Shirey can consult committee members by short wave radio equipment of the Columbia Broadcasting System, which accompanies the expedition."

Charlie Chaplin makes his first microphone address on a Columbia chain Monday night . . . it's for the NRA . . . N.B.C. has scheduled two special broadcasts for Navy Day, Friday . . . Yale-Army and Notre Dame-Pitt are N.B.C. broadcasts today . . . 1:45, WEAF, and 2:45, WJZ.

Dry Law Staff To Be Retained After Repeal

1,200 Employes Will Fight Smugglers and Other Liquor Violators.

Retention of the dry agent staff at full strength after repeal was predicted yesterday by John S. Hurley, Federal director of prohibition.

Hurley's announcement cheered 1,200 employes alarmed by reports their unit would be reduced to skeleton form. Some of the workers already had made plans for return to private life.

"Our task," the director declared, "probably will be just as big if not bigger after repeal. People who have been illegally distilling whisky aren't likely to quit."

The official explained prohibition forces were cut from 2,200 to 1,200 persons August 10 with transfer of the unit from the Treasury to the Justice Department, an efficient operating minimum.

Many agents, Hurley said, probably will be assigned to curb smuggling of liquor from abroad after repeal while others will guard against rum running from wet to dry States. Other details will combat unlicensed manufacture.

Hurley conceded the volume of liquor smuggling would depend on whether the tariff is high or low. He forecast speakeasies would continue in large numbers if good repeal whisky becomes hard to buy.

Worker's Death in Ditch Cave-in Ruled Accident

Death by accident was the verdict of a coroner's jury yesterday in the case of Daniel Hamilton, colored, 30, who was trapped in a ditch cave-in at Forty-sixth and Brandywine streets northwest Wednesday afternoon.

Fred Amberger, 40, a contractor, employer of Hamilton, who had been ordered held after the accident, was exonerated by the verdict.

The Corkscrew.

The corkscrew was a useful tool, in bygone days, throughout the land; when one would quaff a flagon cool, it always was in great demand. All bottles then were plugged with corks, and if the corkscrew was mislaid, we had to dig them out with forks, and what a grievous din we made! The bottle large, the bottle small, the ketchup jug, the demijohn—the corkscrew wrestled with them all, and now that grand old landmark's gone. Men carried corkscrews in their pants, along with keys and pocketknives, and gave new corkscrews to their aunts, and to their nieces and their wives. The hardware dealers stocked their shelves with corkscrews costing many scads, and men bought corkscrews for themselves, and for their uncles and their dads. Inspiring many subtle jests, for years the corkscrew held its own, surviving all the drastic tests, it still was in a class alone. But times have changed and bottles now have simple caps of brass or tin, and even infants well know how to drain the wholesome suds therein. A simple twist is all they need, they need no exercise of brawn; the corkscrews to the dump proceed—another grand old landmark gone. And ever in this changing world some noble landmark disappears; the outworn things are promptly hurled into the scrapheap of the years.

Rock Creek Park Project Is Approved

Planning Commission Has Busy Day; Endorses Mall Program.

Plans for the development of Rock Creek Park's extension into Maryland, calling for baseball diamonds, tennis courts and other recreational facilities, were approved yesterday by the National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

This project, which is linked with proposed improvements for Sligo Park in the same area, was one of many considered and acted upon at yesterday's opening meeting. The Mall program was indorsed, an architectural study of Pennsylvania avenue begun, and plans for a new Arlington County sewerage system offered.

The Rock Creek and Sligo Park projects are dependent upon public works allotments. Yesterday's approval sets the stage for work as soon as funds are available. The development is planned under the Capper-Cramton act.

Four Park Drives Approved.

Transfer of Reservations A and C, the spaces in lower Pennsylvania avenue where the bonus army made its last stand, from the Treasury Department to the National Parks Office was asked by the commission. Such a move will expedite the Mall building program, it was pointed out.

Elaborate plans to build four park drives, flanked by rows of elms, were approved in the Mall project. The commission recommended closing of Maine and Missouri avenues in the Mall development.

If a connecting arch is built to join the Agriculture Department and extension buildings which are separated by B street, it will have to be a single arch without street supports to gain the commission's approval.

Improvement of the north side of Pennsylvania avenue will be studied by Henry V. Hubbard. The proposal was offered by Chairman King, of the Senate District Committee, at the instance of Soterios Nicholson, local publisher.

Slum Drive Given Impetus.

Impetus to the Federal campaign against slums in the Capital was given by the commission's indorsement of plans now under way. It already had approved passage of the alley dwelling bill, which was favorably acted upon in the Senate and now awaits a vote in the House.

Funds totaling $2,500,000 for a sewage disposal system in Arlington County already have been allotted by the Public Works Administration. The next step will be taken November 21, when voters decide the fate of a bond issue. At present the county is without systematic disposal facilities, depending upon the river and dumps.

A program whereby certain homes in Georgetown would be restored and transformed into Colonial mansions was submitted by Horace Peaslee. At today's session plans will be considered to give the Francis Scott Key home, near Key bridge, similar treatment and make it a national shrine.

Anacostia Bridge Proposed.

E. A. Schmidt, War Department engineer, submitted a plan for a bridge to replace the one over the Anacostia River which was the scene of a fatal railroad wreck last month.

The commission will make a study of the Union Square project, at the Mall's east end, assisted by Frederick Law Olmstead.

The principal plan on today's schedule is an improved Washington-Hoover airport. Elimination of Military road, which now separates the two air fields, is provided for.

Other matters which will be presented today include proposed congressional legislation, development of Washington channel and the Alexandria water front and location of the Artemus Ward statue. John Nolen, jr., city planner, will report on the recent meeting in Baltimore of the Cresapeake Bay Authority.

Will Argue Airport Road.

The closing of Military road through the airport and the selection of an alternate route will be discussed today at a meeting in the Navy Building. Those present will include the Arlington County board, County Manager Roy S. Braden and representatives of the War Department and the Park and Planning Commission.

After deciding on this discussion last night the county board continued its study of policy on the county-wide sewage system.

1,800 See Fantasie Score Third Time

"Alice in Wonderland" Hit Draws Large Crowd.

Sheer fantasie scored another hit last evening at the Central High School as the Community Center Department presented for the third time Bess Davis Schreiner's version of Lewis Carroll's immortal "Alice in Wonderland" and "Through the Looking-Glass" before more than 1,800 persons.

Added to this performance was the "Cheshire Cat."

Robert Walton played the King of Hearts, William Rodon, the Knave of Hearts, and Anne Yago McGuffey, the Duchess. Otherwise the original cast remained intact.

"Alice in Wonderland" will be repeated at the Central High School this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

B'nai Israel Installs Officers Monday Night

The Congregation B'nai Israel, Fourteenth and Emerson streets northwest, will install new officers Monday evening.

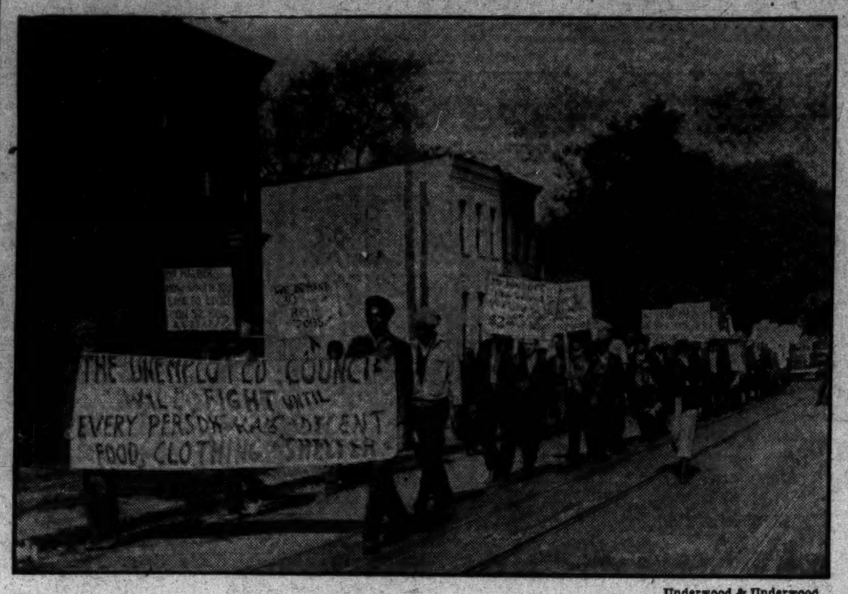
Marchers Parade for Boost in Relief



Underwood & Underwood.

These people marched yesterday to emergency relief division headquarters, where they demanded higher relief pay. They were led by Harold Spencer, local organizer of the Washington Unemployed Council, which is said to be a Communist body. Observe the bashful lady marcher at the right, shielding her face from the camera.

53 Marchers Here Demand Greater Relief

Petition Given to Welfare Director Following Street Parade.

Greater aid for unemployed was demanded by 53 self-styled hunger marchers yesterday upon their appearance at District Emergency Relief headquarters in John Marshall place.

Police outnumbered the demonstrators, but there was no disorder. Special police details were assigned because spokesmen for the Washington Unemployed Council predicted 2,000 would be in line.

Harold Spencer, leader of the movement, was received by Leroy H. Halbert, relief director. The former requested a $2.50 food order for persons on charity rolls during weeks they do not work and payment of their rent.

Halbert said the demands would be submitted to the Board of Public Welfare.

The marchers formed at Twenty-fifth and I streets northwest and Eighth street and Rhode Island avenue northwest. At the second contration point the two lines converged, continuing on toward John Marshall place. They carried banners demanding everything from free food to "freedom for the Scottsboro boys."

The only disorder threat came when the marchers attempted to send a committee of six instead of five into the relief headquarters to see Halbert. The director previously indicated he would see only five members.

D. C. Humane Societies Share in Kendall Estate

Two Washington humane societies will receive $5,000 each from the estate of Miss Georgiana Kendall, who died several days ago in New York, according to Associated Press dispatches.

Miss Kendall bequeathed $5,000 each to the National Society for Humane Regulation of Vivisection and the Antisteel Trap League. Headquarters of both are in Washington. Miss Kendall also left $360,000 to 32 other organizations, and $300,000 to relatives and friends.

U. S. Building Row Hearing Proposed

Action by Labor Board and Treasury Hinted.

The iron workers' four-hour-day controversy, which is delaying the public-buildings program, may be laid before the Treasury Department and the National Labor Board, it was learned yesterday.

One subcontractor said the matter already had been presented to the Treasury's supervising architect and Senator Robert F. Wagner, chairman of the Labor Board. Senator Wagner said yesterday the dispute had not yet been brought to his attention.

The iron workers' local union inaugurated the split shift October 2. Since then subcontractors on virtually every Federal building under construction have shut down.

G. U. Has Youngest College R. O. T. C. Officer.

Georgetown University claims the youngest R. O. T. C. officer of any college unit in the country.

He is John I. Griffin, of Brooklyn, N. Y., who entered Georgetown before he completed his thirteenth year and who observed his seventeenth birthday last Wednesday. He will graduate in June at a younger age than most boys enter college.

Because of his youth Griffin must wait nearly four years after his graduation from the R. O. T. C. before he can secure his commission as a lieutenant in the Officers Reserve Corps.

Scouts Plan Huge Jamboree Here in 1935

Roosevelt Aids Project for Meeting Expected to Draw 50,000.

Plans for a grand conclave, such as Washington has never seen before, leaked out yesterday when it was learned preliminary steps are being taken to hold a Boy Scout jamboree here in 1935.

National Scout officials have been working on the scheme with President Roosevelt himself. The Chief Executive has taken keen interest in scouting for years and is expected to make an announcement on the jamboree soon.

The event would be a twenty-fifth anniversary celebration, and 50,000 boys would attend, it is estimated. A site is being sought which would be adequate for the encampment. At least 250 acres will be required. If a suitable location is not available in or close to the Capital, the jamboree may be abbreviated to a mere 10,000 to 25,000.

Although the proposed jamboree will be national and not international, due to the inability of many foreign representatives to stand the expense, scouts from other nations will be invited.

British Asked To Hold Brock, Indicted Here

Former Head of School For Boys Believed to Be in Wales.

Detention of the Rev. H. Priestly Brock, under indictment here on a charge of obtaining money under false pretenses, will be asked of English authorities by the State Department, it was learned last night.

A request for the detention of the alleged pseudo-clergyman, who is believed to be in Wales, was sent to the Department of Justice by the district attorney. This request was sent to the State Department, which is preparing to forward it to England.

Brock's status as a clergyman has been questioned by high Episcopal Church authorities, who testified before the District grand jury, which inquired into business transactions in connection with a boys' school he conducted at Cockeysville, Md.

It is alleged he obtained $2,000 from Miss Edith C. Emmons, of Washington Grove, Md., on the pretext he was to use it for the school.

Brock disappeared from Washington March 3. With him were Robert and Richard Vinall, 16 and 15 years old, respectively, sons of R. V. Vinall, an employe of the Bureau of Printing and Engraving.

The boys' whereabouts are unknown to their parents. They were next heard from in Wales, when one of them sent a postcard to a playmate. Their return also is asked by the State Department.

Theft Suspects Face Grand Jury

Four Held on $100,000 Police Court Bonds.

An alleged automobile theft ring was nipped in the bud yesterday when Police Court Judge John P. McMahon held four youths for the action of the grand jury under bonds totaling $100,000.

The boys, charged with housebreaking, are William Parker, 19, of 3716 Twelfth street northeast; John Parker, 17, of 3716 Twelfth street northeast; Harvey Frederick, 19, of 1253 Newton street northeast, and James Ferrier, 19, of Hyattsville, Md., were alleged to have stolen a washing machine from an apartment.

Police reported they found evidence leading them to believe the boys are implicated in a large car-stealing ring. They allege the ring has stolen 11 automobiles recently.

Wave of Holdups Stirs City Police

Officers Start Extra Duty in Drive on Crime.

Determined to stamp out the present wave of holdups, assaults, and petty thievery, all members of the Police Department yesterday began extra duty on the streets of Washington.

Besides foot patrolmen, all available radio cars and headquarters cruisers have begun patrolling streets at night. Many of the men are working 20 hours a day.

Special importance has been placed on a series of taxicab holdups and assault cases. Chief of Detectives Frank S. W. Burke and his assistant, Capt. B. W. Thompson, are working late at night directing their men personally.

Newspaper Thief Gets $10 Fine or Jail Term

Herbert Wrighton, colored, 24, of Brown's Court, was sentenced to pay a $10 fine or serve ten days in jail yesterday when he admitted stealing newspapers from a corner rack.

Sentence was pronounced in Police Court by Judge John P. McMahon.

Two More Inspectors Seek Smoke Violators

Complaints of violations of the antismoke law yesterday prompted Dr. Edward J. Schwartz, acting health officer, to assign two additional inspectors to enforce the law.

Warrants will be sought against operators of one or more apartment houses and hotels, it was said.

Car and Bus Routes in City To Be Revised Schedules Will Be Drawn When Transfer Plan Is Adopted.

Extensive rerouting on street car and bus lines of the Capital Transit Co. is to be undertaken by the Public Utilities Commission and the company as soon as details of the universal transfer plans have been worked out.

Revision of the transportation system is to be undertaken with a view to meeting future needs and development of the Capital for years to come. With the possible exception of a few changes of obvious merit the undertaking will be held in abeyance until a thoroughly considered plan has been worked out.

The transfer plan being studied is more complicated than appears and it is not expected the commission will approve it before the middle of next month. The Capital Transit Co. begins operation of the merger transportation systems after midnight, December 1. It is desired to make the transfer plan public sufficiently in advance of that time.

Many plans have been advanced in the past for rerouting of car lines and revision of car and bus service. These will be studied anew in connection with the merged systems.

Abandonment of some parallel car lines will be considered as well as the joining of Washington Railway & Electric and Capital Traction lines at certain points. Substitution of bus for street car service also will be studied.

Abandonment of the LeDroit Park line has been suggested. Removal of two of the four tracks on Fourteenth street between New York avenue and H street northwest is regarded by many as likely. Other proposed changes include running the Fourteenth street cars straight down that street, eliminating the present swing around Fifteenth street; connecting the H street line with the Pennsylvania avenue line at Fifteenth street and New York avenue; connecting the Wisconsin avenue line with the M street line.

These changes probably will not be decided for several months.

Concern Sued On Home Loan

Woman Demands Name of Mortgage Holder to Obtain Bonds.

An attempt to force the firm of Arms & Drury, Inc., 1710 I street northwest, to reveal the identity of the person holding mortgage notes on the home of Mrs. Celia Albert, 237 Eighth street northeast, was begun in District Supreme Court yesterday.

Attorneys for Mrs. Albert declared they desired the information so that Home Loan Owners Association bonds could be tendered to replace the mortgage.

Mrs. Albert said she paid interest to Arms & Drury. She said the firm's refusal to name the note holder prevented her from obtaining a Federal loan.

Paul Frizzell, Home Loan officer, was named as a defendant, although he is attempting to assist Mrs. Albert in her refinancing. Justice F. D. Letts signed orders requiring Arms & Drury and Frizzell to show cause October 31 why they should not be compelled to tell their reasons for, first, failing to get the name of the mortgage owner, and, second, why the name should not be furnished Mrs. Albert.

Attorneys Daniel Ring and James T. Crouch appeared for Mrs. Albert.

Four Captured As Counterfeit Gang in Chase

Woman, 3 Men, All From Washington, Accused of Virginia Swindles.

A trail of counterfeit $5 bills, used for the past month to mulct storekeepers in Virginia communities, led to the arrest yesterday in Fredericksburg, Va., of four Washingtonians.

The four allegedly led by Mrs. Louise Zimberg, 27, was captured by State police after a 10-mile automobile chase. Police said they found $500 in spurious bills in the machine.

Mrs. Zimberg is the wife of Harry Zimberg, who has been questioned repeatedly by police in liquor conspiracy cases. She gave her address as 553 Fifteenth street northeast.

Others arrested were her brother-in-law, Solomon Zimberg, 28, same address; her brother, Willie Woodson, 18, of 921 Eighth street southeast, and Dennis Mallory, 23, of 747 Seventh street northeast.

Mrs. Zimberg was identified by Haywood Wright as the "blonde woman" who gave him a counterfeit $5 bill at J. H. Payne's store in Spottsylvania County Monday. Wright reported the number of the license tags to police.

The chase led south of Fredericksburg on the Richmond-Washington highway. The prisoners told police they did not know the bills were in the car.

Drive Is Aimed Against Fake Surety Firms

Conviction of 2 Is Only Beginning, Insurance Chief Asserts.

Conviction of two men in Police Court for violation of the District insurance code is only the beginning of a campaign against "fake" insurance companies operating here, Herbert L. Davis, superintendent of insurance, said yesterday.

The District has been a happy hunting ground for these companies, Mr. Davis said. Most of them require no physical examination. Offering cheaper rates and highly decorative emblems, they find many clients among poorer classes. But when accident or sickness occurs, the companies offer to settle only at their headquarters in some distant State.

Code Requires Licenses.

The insurance code provides that all companies operating here shall be licensed by the superintendent of insurance. A number of these concerns, which do not directly offer to insure, have not applied for licenses. But if insurance is any part of the offer, the company comes under provisions of the code.

The men convicted Thursday were Sidney F. Tomes and Brode E. Odom, representing the National Accident Society. They were charged with violating the insurance code and also obtaining money under false pretenses.

Postoffice Cooperates.

Many of the fake concerns operate through the mails, and the District will ask for fraud orders against them. In this way they will be barred from the mails. The postoffice has agreed to cooperate.

Most of the fake companies have large sucker lists. "In many instances such concerns have no substantial assets, and seemingly have no intention of carrying out their contracts," Mr. Davis declared. There are about 20 of these operating here.

Four Held for Jury In Whisky Thefts

Accused of Looting Two Drug Stores.

Four members of a gang alleged to have looted two drug stores of cigarettes and whisky, were held for the grand jury at a hearing yesterday in Police Court.

Charles Kennedy, 23, of 459 E street southeast; Benjamin Fletcher, 21, Lyon Park, and Robert Murphy, 30, no fixed address, were charged with housebreaking. Fletcher and Murphy were held under $2,000 bond. Kennedy was held without bond.

The fourth man, Louis Dinkin, 42, of 527 Seventh street northwest, alleged to have received stolen cigarettes from the men, was held under $5,000 bond, charged with receiving stolen property.

Two Put Under Bond In Rum, Weapon Case

Two men were held on $600 bond each on charges of transportation and concealed weapons by Police Judge John P. McMahon yesterday.

The two, Richard F. Green, 32, colored, of 429 M street northwest, and Thomas J. Sullivan, 26, of 2213 F street northwest, are alleged to have had a large quantity of liquor in their automobile when arrested Thursday at Twelfth and Pennsylvania avenue northwest. A tear gas gun and cartridges were found on each, police said.

2 Negroes Here Want to Wed Before They Die in Chair

Girls Are Ready; Unique Request Puzzles Authorities.

Two convicted murderers awaiting electrocution in the District Jail want to be married before they die. Their requests, without precedent in the Capital's penal annals, came to light yesterday.

One will go to the chair next Friday. The slayer of Mannie Solomon, a taxicab driver, has received several reprieves during 23 months in a death cell. Now every effort has been tried and failed, and the last mile is a few steps away. But first he wants to become a husband.

The other doomed prisoner killed Milo Kennedy, a park policeman, and must expiate his crime November 29. Both are Negroes. The girls they would marry have agreed to carry out their troth, but permission must first be obtained from District authorities.

The Rev. James L. Pinn, Baptist spiritual adviser of the Negroes, heard their pleas and hopes to have their wishes granted. Monday he will confer with George S. Wilson, director of public welfare.
